$10,000,000 Target.
Berlin Getting Ready.
Just What Is One Dollar?
Banks Spread Afar.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE OLD battleship New Mexico, having been "rebuilt and improved" at a cost of $10,000,000, is sent on what the Navy calls "a shakedown cruise." The taxpayers of this country were also sent on a "shakedown cruise" when those ten millions were thrown away on a floating target for air bombs in case war should come.

Consider your intelligent country that scraps new and half-finished battleships of modern design to oblige some smooth-tongued foreigner at a naval conference and then squanders ten million dollars on an obsolete type of ship.

That is not the worst of it. Sixty million more dollars will be spent rebuilding other antiquated targets for airplanes.

"EVERY APARTMENT house in Germany is to be equipped with a gas-proof and bomb-proof cellar, and every adult German trained in self-protection against air attacks."

The French who keep both eyes on Germany while increasing their fighting air fleet, will think that Germany must be planning something.

FRANCE WORRIES about the gold basis. She still has eighty-two billion francs worth of gold in her vaults. She fears it may be impossible for her to remain a "gold nation" with the Yankee dollar and British pound slipping downward.

This country also worries a little about gold, wondering why the dollar was kicked off the gold basis, and reduced to sixty odd cents, and dollars less plentiful than they were before gold was abandoned.

It is a solemn truth that "nobody understands money."

WASHINGTON reports an early "definite announcement of the immediate monetary policy of the United States," also that the government will define the status of the dollar.

Those that have a dollar will be much obliged. You cannot tell how hot or cold it is when the bottom drops out of a thermometer, and you can't know what you've got in the way of money or goods if you don't know what your dollar is worth.

BANKING AND financing are back on the world-wide basis of ancient days, when the Medici sent ships to the edge of the Bosphorus and had men in far Asia and all over Europe.

It is interesting to see in the new board of directors of New York's National City Bank, second biggest bank in the world, names of men that live three thousand miles from New York. For instance, John Francis Neylan, a powerful young lawyer, of San Francisco, and his fellow-townsman, A. P. Giannini.

The National City, like Mr. Aldrich's Chase Bank, and other great banks, now spreads over the world, with branches in Japan, China, India.

UPTON SINCLAIR, who once wrote about the slaughter-houses in Chicago, and attracted attention, will stop being a Socialist, become a Democrat and run for governor of California.

This is part of his platform: When a rich man dies Sinclair would confiscate everything above $50,000, and he would take one-half of all incomes above $50,000.

Cynics believe that Mr. Sinclair must have $50,000, but they are mistaken. He is sincere in his belief that you can make the world better by discouraging men of exceptional ability.

If he lived in Africa he would say to the African chief:

"You can't have more than one fat wife no matter HOW many lions you kill."

It is wise to give a chief that kills lions as many fat wives as he wants, and let an able, constructive American have a few extra millions. He can't take them with him.

THE REV. HENRY S. HUNTINGTON, of Scarsdale, N. Y., reports that he visited, near Chicago, "a nudist colony," where he "hung his clothes on a hickory limb and enjoyed a most exhilarating game of volley ball."

The group accompanying him to the nudist colony consisted of "a consulting scientist, a young engineer and his wife, a young business woman, a Chicago clergyman."

You would have said ten years ago that human beings were as foolish as they ever could be, but you would have been mistaken.

SCIENCE FINDS "a simple test for alcoholic intoxication," according to the American Chemical Society. Just a finger prick, enough to get two drops of blood, and science will tell how much alcohol the blood contains.

This, with the Eighteenth Amendment gone, will cause nervous husbands to examine their fingertips in the morning.

Total abstainers may be shocked to learn that, whether they drink anything alcoholic or not, their blood contains alcohol "in about the proportion of ten parts in a million."

COURT BACKS 'PHANTOM' PROBE

Writ to Keep Books From Registration Heads Refused

Today Offers Last Chance to Qualify To Vote Tuesday

Citizens of Pittsburgh and the three third class cities, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton, have their last opportunity today to register for the primary election. Registration hours are from 8 a. m. until 11 a. m. and from 5 p. m. until 11 p. m., daylight saving time. Residents of the county outside the cities who are regularly enrolled but who do not have tax receipts must get them before going to the polls Tuesday.

The court today upheld the right of the Registration Commission to investigate irregularities in registration, to summon witnesses, to bring in the records of registrars and to strike out names which they find improperly registered.

With but little time remaining until Tuesday's primary election, the Registration Commission is

Mines Idle, Coal Code Awaited

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—Informations charging rioting and felonious assault with intent to kill were filed today against M. B. Donovan, assistant superintendent of the Gates mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, and eight deputy sheriffs.

By AL GOUGH

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—Practically every mine in the Connellsville coke region stood idle today, the men who dig coal for their bread and butter anxiously awaiting word of the signing of the coal code which will end the "holiday" which has kept them out of the pits for five days.

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Representatives of different groups of coal operators today began signing the finally evolved, code of fair practice for their industry.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Soft coal's NRA code today still lacked final acceptance by operators of this basic industry, but Hugh S. Johnson predicted ratification was only a matter of hours.

The full text of the code was on paper. It had the approval of the industry's committee of 18 leading producers. But President Roosevelt's desire to have the charter ready for signature last night was blocked when a three-hour meeting proved insufficient to obtain the indorsement of the individual operators and coal associations represented on the committee.

This needed ratification was expected by Johnson today as directors of the Smokeless-Appalachian Coal Association and the Northern Coal Control Association gathered to continue their study of the completed code. The operators recessed after 2 o'clock this morning for a few hours' sleep.

One leading member of these two important associations, whose members produce about half the nation's coal tonnage, said they were ready to accept the code approved by the committee. Most of the other associations present were represented as ready to sign.

Final approval will close more than two months of negotiations, and was expected by the administration to end the strike of Western Pennsylvania miners who walked out in protest against delayed wage increases.

ROOSEVELT AWAITS AGREEMENT

President Roosevelt cancelled week-end plans to await the bituminous coal agreement. He also vetoed a statement agreed on by NRA's labor and industrial advisory boards seeking to interpret labor's collective bargaining guarantee in the recovery law.

Mr. Roosevelt was represented as believing the law's language permitting employes to choose their own representatives was clear and fair, and that any further attempt at interpretation would only complicate the existing situation between labor and industry.

Prominent in the NRA picture was Secretary Perkins' estimate that 750,000 workers returned to jobs in the month ended August 15, and that payrolls in 89 of the major manufacturing industries increased $12,000,000.

LABOR CONTRACTS

Part of today's coal task was finishing the labor contract discussions in progress between Appalachian commercial operators and the United Mine Workers of America. These contracts will embrace a good share of the mines in the vast production region reaching from Pennsylvania to Tennessee.

When the soft coal's committee of 18 approved the code draft last night, Johnson issued a statement which he said was authorized by the President. It said:

"After all day conferences a bituminous coal code agreeable to the conference representatives has been approved for recommendation to the group of individual operators and associations of producers to whom copies have just been relayed.

BULLETIN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The radio marine station at Tuckerton, N. J., picked up a message today saying the British steamer New Mexico was in distress off Fourteen Foot Land Light, Delaware Bay. The message reported the United States steamship Kalmia on the way to give assistance.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Whirling out of the tropics, a terrific hurricane today was sweeping the Virginia coast leaving behind it a wide wake of destruction in the Carolinas.

The center of the storm had passed Cape Hatteras and the preceding swirl of its winds were lashing at Cape Henry and the Virginia coast.

Along the Virginia seaboard there was a steadily rising gale. It reached a velocity of 65 miles an hour at the Capes before 10 o'clock, and the peak was due here during the afternoon. A blow of 5 miles an hour was recorded in the city proper and weather bureau officials said it would increase steadily.

Whipping up tremendous tides ahead of it, the Weather Bureau at Norfolk warned thta the peak winds may bring with them the unprecedented heights of August 23, when Willoughby Spit was inundated and other sections of the city flooded waist deep.

Tides and winds swept over the North Carolina coast today, inundated towns and severed communication. Two persons were known to have drowned and a third was missing.

The hurricane was the second from the tropics in two days. The first struck the coast of Mexico yesterday and left six dead, 50 injured and 2,000 homeless in the Tampico district.

New Bern, N. C., a coastal city of 11,000 inhabitants, was inundated.

LAMSON'S FATE DUE JURY TODAY

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The all-important hour for David A. Lamson approached today when legal processes were speeded to end his trial on wife murder charges in time to get the case into the hands of the jury for week-end deliberation.

Judge R. R. Syer ordered opening of court at 8 a. m. so Deputy District Attorney Allan P. Lindsay could finish his argument against the young Stanford University publishing house executive charged with beating his attractive wife, Allene, to death.

The court announced plans to instruct the jury so it could begin deliberating on the case by noon.

Thousands Parade in NRA Victory Day Celebration Here

Greatest Celebration Since Armistice Marks New Deal

Pittsburgh rolled up its sleeves this morning and went back to work after shouting a spectacular toast to the Blue Eagle in last night's NRA Victory Day parade—the greatest since that thrilling Armistice Day of 15 years ago.

Down the avenue of yelling, laughing, hopeful faces, the feet of many thousands snapped to the rhythm of 30 bands and bugle corps.

It was a great parade. Everybody was there and their shouts and singing left no doubt that a New Deal is in the air. Their cheers went up in appreciation of the beauty of 70 floats, the maneuvers of the drum and bugle corps and the sturdy marchers of labor and employer. But they seemed to mean something more—a confidence that President Roosevelt's NRA was at work.

For two hours and a half the parade moved with martial music through the heart of the city, across the Allegheny River and before the reviewing stand in West Park. There was not a dull spot along the entire line. Rather color, zest and an air of patriotism that can only be likened to that of the original Armistice Day parade.

Column followed column of workers, many of them only recently sent back to their jobs as their industries have been gathered under the wide-spreading wings of the Blue Eagle.

That parade was a band uniting every divergent phase of Pittsburgh civic and commercial life under a single emblem, and

Wounded Deputy Aided By Striker-Brother

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Start of the miners' "holiday" in the Southwestern Pennsylvania coal fields this week found two brothers on opposite sides in the controversy.

One, Boyd Cutright, 43, of New Salem, was serving as a deputy officer for the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

The other, Guy Cutright, a miner employed by the Frick company, joined the strikers.

In a clash between pickets and deputies, Boyd Cutright, the deputy, was shot and so seriously wounded that one arm had to be amputated.

Last night physicians at a Uniontown hospital said Cutright's condition was critical and they called for volunteers for a blood transfusion.

The brother, Guy, was among the first to volunteer and his offer was accepted at once.

Doctors say the deputy's condition is still grave, but add that he has a chance to recover.

BLUE LAW WAR LOOMS AS WILKINSBURG BANS VETS' SHOW

ACTING BURGESS BALKS SUNDAY BENEFIT

V. F. W. Plans Counter Attack Against Borough Stores

The older residents of Wilkinsburg who witnessed a "blue law" war in that borough a quarter of a century ago are about to see another, according to rumors.

John H. Rhodes, acting burgess, has ordered the discontinuance of Sunday night benefit shows in the Rowland Theater by Wilkinsburg Veterans of Foreign Wars. He said that if a show is held tomorrow night those responsible will be prosecuted.

The former soldiers and their sympathizers are planning, it was said, to retaliate by instituting suits under the ancient blue laws against merchants in the borough who sell any articles other than necessities. Merchants selling cigarettes, cigars and candy will not be excepted, according to those protesting against the edict of the Burgess.

Mr. Rhodes, acting burgess since the resignation of William M. Turner, who resigned when appointed postmaster of Pittsburgh, said members of the Wilkinsburg Ministerial Association have complained to him about the Sunday night show. Burgess Rhodes said the situation might be different if all the money realized went to charity. He said a portion of it went to expenses for putting on the show, and it therefore was not entirely a charity benefit.

Although not having any political significance, an interesting feature of the situation is that Rhodes and William P. Yocum, chairman of the benefit show committee of Sergt. David I. Rankin Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Wilkinsburg, are both candidates at the Republican primaries for the office of burgess.

During the administration of Postmaster Turner, as burgess, pressure was brought to bear upon him to stop the Sunday night shows, but he would not interfere, he said, as long as it was for a worthy cause. Resolutions of protest were read in some of the churches, but Turner declined to stop the show. The shows do not begin until after night services of the churches.

MARKED KIDNAP CASH GIVEN U. S.

By THOMAS WRIGLEY
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—In the nick of time, the federal government has scored an outstanding victory in the famous Charles F. Urschel kidnap case of Oklahoma.

The American Railway Express, through headquarters here, it is learned, last night agreed to turn over to the Department of Justice $690 of marked money which the government will use as its trump card in the trial.

Monday, in Oklahoma City, Harvey Bailey, super-outlaw, and regarded as the most dangerous criminal in the entire country, goes on trial for the kidnaping of Urschel, millionaire oil operator, and the government is now ready to go to bat.

The marked money, part of the ransom reputed to have been $200,000 paid for Urschel's release is regarded by government agents as one of the strongest links in the chain forged against Bailey and 13 others under federal indictment for the crime.

It was found on Albert L. Bates, notorious criminal, and alleged to be a ring-leader in the kidnap plot, when Bates was captured in Denver some weeks ago.

SLEEP SICKNESS DEATH HALTED

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A period of more than 12 hours without a death in Greater St. Louis from "sleeping sickness" today strengthened the belief of scientists that the epidemic definitely was on the wane.

Since the outbreak of the epidemic in mid-July, 146 deaths have been reported.

Dr. Edward Carl Rosenow, experimental bacteriologist of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., who inoculated rabbits with fluid taken from encephalitis victims, today advised physicians to treat the disease with a serum which has been developed as a result of his researches.

Dr. Rosenow, who is in Rochester, said he planned to return to St. Louis to continue his experiments.

The Real Job Is Still Ahead -:- By QUIN HALL

COURT UPHOLDS 'PHANTOM' WAR

expected to increase its efforts to strike phantom names from the lists.

Today Pittsburgh voters are being given their last opportunity to qualify for the election. State and county police are on guard at 400 polling places in the city to prevent disorders.

'UNDERCOVER' GUARD

As a precaution against "undercover work," the Registration Commission held up distribution of books for nearly all districts until this morning. Registration Commission workers took the books to the polling places before the polls opened today.

The decision by the court defining the powers of the Registration Commission refuses an injunction asked by Ella T. Steinhauser, of Termon avenue, to restrain the commission from collecting all books from the registrars when the polls close tonight.

The opinion, by Judges James R. Macfarlane, Ambrose B. Reid and William H. McNaugher, states, however, that the voter must not be deprived of his rights except on sworn testimony or by proper documentary evidence.

Before names are stricken from the lists, hearings must be held, the court holds, and adds that counsel for the Registration Commission has assured the court that this will be done.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

Regarding public hearings, the court states:

"A public hearing does not mean that the idle, the curious, the disturber or the general public can be present. Counsel and other interested persons should be admitted so far as practical."

The court states that the payment of taxes by an agent is lawful. The payment of taxes of a large number of persons by an agent may arouse suspicion of fraud, the court finds, but the burden of proof is on the attacker of the voting rights of the citizen.

As citizens flocked to the polls today to enroll, 900 voting machines were loaded on trucks at the new County Building to be distributed to city polling places. A national guardsman in plainclothes is watching each machine until it is turned over to the election board Tuesday morning.

The Court House was jammed today with citizens paying poll taxes.

TAX ORDERS CHECKED

The Registration Commission last night began checking the tax orders of the County Treasurer and also the registration books, to check the names of illegal registrants.

The commission had been previously refused permission to have the Treasurer's records turned over in bulk. The final court order was to the effect that the Treasurer turn over all records as they were called by wards.

The Registration Commission worked but a short time last night before one of the boards of the Second Ward was called in. It is alleged that this board permitted persons to register who had never appeared before the board for questioning. Chairman Morrow said it is likely that the entire board will be removed. Morrow also filled 20 other vacancies caused by illness.

Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas Court yesterday ordered the names of 11 men living at the Improvement of the Poor, 428 Duquesne way, to be placed on the registry books. The Registration Commission had attempted to stop their voting by alleging they were charity residents of a charity home.

EX-BEER BARON FREED BY JURY

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Edward (Spike) O'Donnell can tell the world he isn't a vagrant, and back the statement up with court proof.

A jury in Judge Frank M. Padden's court acquitted the reputed one-time beer gang leader late yesterday, without giving him a chance to give a speech he had prepared for them.

As a result the hearing lost much of the hilarity O'Donnell had promised after taking the stand several days ago to defend his reputed bodyguard, Sanford (Gimp) Rosenbaum, in whose case on a similar charge the jury disagreed.

Yesterday O'Donnell was serious and answered all questions without any show of bravado or oratory. He testified that when arrested he was talking to a city inspector and was not armed.

Before the jury returned its verdict O'Donnell sent his mother, wife, two daughters and son home. First, however, he kissed all but the boy goodby.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—French and British leaders will discuss with American Ambassador-at-large Norman H. Davis early next week a French disarmament plan said to be based on a scheme of international arms control and the limitation of military forces to the present level.

The conversations are preliminary to the reopening of the arms conference in Geneva.

WELLES SILENT AFTER SECRET CUBAN PARLEY

U.S. Envoy Makes First Contact With 'New Government'

HAVANA, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—American Ambassador Sumner Welles held a long secret session today with a committee of the student directorate, staunch supporters of President Grau San Martin.

This was the Ambassador's first contact with the new government, and came at a time when Grau San Martin, in another closed meeting, told his strongest opponents that he would not accede to their demands that he resign the presidency, to which he ascended less than a week ago.

Welles was said by a student spokesman to have expressed approval of the directorate's progovernment program.

WELLES MUM

The Ambassador left the conference apparently well pleased, but did not comment. A student representative said Welles had sought an explanation of criticism directed at him in some quarters and had denied rumors he was protecting 500 army and navy officers entrenched in the National Hotel.

The student spokesman quoted the ambassador as saying there would be no American intervention in Cuba, although it is possible American Marines may be landed if the lives and property of Americans in Cuba are menaced.

Welles and the committee met in the home of Eduardo Chibas, secretary of public works under Carlos Manuel De Cespedes, whose return to the presidency is sought by the officers in the hotel.

HOTEL BESIEGED

Afterwards students took positions near the hotel and compelled residents in the Vedado section to drive 16 blocks out of their way to reach their homes.

They said the government had been informed that the besieged officers planned to start firing on the 500 soldiers and students who held them virtual prisoners in the fortress-like hostelry, in which the officers are supplied with many guns.

Meanwhile powerful forces, including the A B C and O C R R secret societies, the Nationalist followers of Col. Carlos Mendieta and supporters of former President Mario G. Menocal, during a protracted session, insisted Grau San Martin make way for a new government of national scope.

FAKE CASH PLOT LAID TO BERLIN

International News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Shielding his identity for fear of reprisals, a German journalist took the witness stand at the unofficial inquiry into the Reichstag fire today and accused his fatherland of a plot to wreck French currency.

In 1925, he said, the German government established a factory to produce counterfeit 1,000-franc notes. The object, he charges, was to throw them on the world money markets and damage French credit.

The charges were made in the course of testimony concerning Dr. George Bell, German journalist and minor state official who was murdered under mysterious circumstances in Munich last March. Dr. Bell, the witness said, was involved in a German trial dealing with the falsification of money.

TEXT APPROVED BY PRODUCERS' COMMITTEE

Roosevelt Awaiting Completion by Agreement

"They are now under consideration for action at the Shoreham Hotel. The conferees represent a very large majority of the national tonnage."

Three hours later, the hotel meeting recessed without final action. Johnson was present and told newsmen not much more time was needed to get the code to the President.

The code, as finally written by the operators, provided for a 40-hour maximum work week and a minimum pay scale ranging from $5.63 in Montana to $3.75 for southwestern states. Alabama and Western Kentucky, which have demanded even lower rates, are to continue negotiations with the administration. The rates were for skilled underground labor. Other wages are to be adjusted proportionately.

'CLARIFICATION'

The extended struggle of Appalachian operators for inclusion of a clause which would guarantee the open shop at their mines was reflected in the addition of NRA's "clarification" statement to the collective bargaining language put in every code.

In that statement, Johnson and Donald Richberg, the administration's general counsel, said in part that employers "can make collective bargains with organized employes or individual agreements with those who choose to act individually."

The code also provided that miners should have the right to choose representatives to check the weight or measure of the coal they mined; that any reductions from pay, if not agreed to by miners and operators, should be subject to such rules as the administrator might prescribe; that miners could not be compelled to live in company houses or deal at company stores; that no person less than 17 years old should be employed in the mines, and that the NRA should investigate the possibility of changing wages and hours and submit its findings to a conference of miners and operators January 5.

Fair prices for coal could be fixed by marketing agencies or, in their absence, by divisional code authorities.

'UNFAIR PRACTICES'

A long list of "unfair practices" which have developed as a result of cut-throat competition was banned.

Divisional code authorities, with a National Bituminous Coal Board at their head, would administer the code.

All labor disputes would be referred to an arbitration system to be set up by miners and operators. At its head would be a National Bituminous Coal Labor Board, whose decisions would be binding for at least six months.

For administrative purposes, the coal fields would be divided into five regions: They would be:

2—Iowa, Indiana and Illinois.

3—Alabama, Southern Tennessee and Georgia.

4—The Southwestern states.

5—All other coal-producing states west of the Mississippi.

Each would have a divisional code authority to be made up of representatives of associations in sub-divisions, and one representative of the President of the United States.

The authority would collect and compile any data required by the recovery act, and investigate complaints of unfair practices.

A national bituminous coal board would top the administrative set-up. It would be composed of four members from the Appalachian region, two from Illinois-Indiana-Iowa and one from each of the other divisions, together with the five members of the divisional authorities appointed by the President and the recovery administrator as ex-officio chairman.

Adjustment of disputes between operators and miners would be settled, if possible, "by conference and negotiation between duly designated representatives" of both sides in mine, district or division conferences.

ADJUSTMENT PLAN

The code said:

"It shall be the duty of employers and employes to exert every reasonable effort to establish such a machinery of adjustment and to utilize it to negotiate to a conclusion such controversies wherever possible."

Any dispute which could not be settled by that machinery would be referred to a divisional bituminous labor board to be selected by miners, operators and the President's divisional representatives. The board's decision would be binding for at least six months.

A national labor board, consisting of the members of the divisional boards, would have final jurisdiction in disputes affecting more than one region or influencing the "welfare of the industry as a whole."

Divisional authority could suggest amendments to the code to the administrator for reference to the President.

JUDGE TO NAME OVERSEERS OF ELECTION

McArdle Aide Makes Plea for Largest Number

Judge James H. Gray was to appoint a number of overseers today for Tuesday's election in various city and county districts, as a result of the presentation of petitions, asking for them.

The request for the largest number was presented by Attorney William S. Saul, representing P. J. McArdle, candidate for Mayor. He petitioned for the appointment of 152 in various districts of the following wards:

Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Seventeenth, Twentieth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-seventh, Twenty-ninth and Thirty-second. The McArdle petitions will be taken up Monday.

OVERSEERS ASKED

Petitions acted on today will be for the appointment of overseers in McKeesport, North Braddock, Rankin and one district in Carnegie.

Judge Gray yesterday made an order directing the Registration Commission to register 11 voters from 428 Duquesne way, or the lodging house of the Association for the Improvement of the Poor. A total of 367 men were assessed from this place.

Judge Gray refused to make a blanket order, directing that all of them be registered in the First District of the Second Ward. However, he told Attorney Ira Hurwick, representing the petitioners in the 11 cases, that if others entitled to vote were refused registration and it was done illegally, each case would be heard.

RESIDENTS OF HOME

It was shown by Harry Gale, assistant superintendent for the Improvement of the Poor, that the 11 men ordered registered had been residents of the premises anywhere from a few months to nearly two years. He said there are 578 beds in the place.

The 11 men refused registration testified that they worked for the association and outsiders and had paid their own tax fees of 50 cents. Judge Gray ruled that he would not disfranchise any men from this place, if it can be shown they are legally entitled to vote.

JURY WEIGHS EDDIE'S FATE

EBENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A jury today ponders the testimony of Leon P. Bennett, Cambria County Poor Director, who asserts Mayor Eddie McCloskey, of Johnstown, punched him during a demonstration at relief headquarters last June.

On the stand yesterday, Bennett, recently resigned as director of the County Emergency Relief Board, said McCloskey led a group of unemployed to the headquarters with a protest against the method of distributing jobless aid.

The Mayor is on trial charged with riot, inciting to riot and assault and battery.

The R. F. C. chairman, however, declined to comment.

Two of the listed officers are members of the New York Stock Exchange, and all are members of the brokerage firm of J. Robinson Duff, 1 Wall street, New York, the newspaper says.

The corporation has 2,500 shares of no par value, and was incorporated through the New Jersey Registration and Trust Company, East Orange, with the following officers: Col. THAW, WOMAN DENY ROMANCE

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Harry Kendall Thaw returned from Germany on the Bremen yesterday, regretting he did not have money enough to spend more time traveling abroad. On the voyage home, Thaw was seen frequently in the company of Mrs. Margery De Aguirre, a pretty brunette, formerly Margery Skinner, of New Orleans.

Questioned concerning the friendship, Thaw, who is 62, stout and gray, commented grimly:

"To the best of my knowledge, Mrs. Aguirre is married to Mr. Aguirre."

Questioned later, Mrs. De Aguirre exclaimed indignantly:

"It would be absurd and cruel to link my name with Mr. Thaw's. It would ruin my divorce and re-marriage. I have come to America to remain in New York about 10 days and then go to Nevada to divorce Mr. De Aguirre, whom I married a year ago."

BUS EXECUTIVE KIDNAP VICTIM

With a strange story of how he was robbed, kidnaped, taken to Akron and sent to Baltimore, Albert Johnson, owner of the Mt. Troy Bus Company, missing since Wednesday, was back home today, his wife, Mrs. Ella Johnson, said.

Mrs. Johnson reported her husband missing when he failed to return Wednesday from a brief business trip to Washington, Pa. Yesterday morning, from Baltimore, Johnson telephoned his wife, telling her, she said, that he had been robbed, that he was safe and that he could give her no details because he "was told to keep his mouth shut."

He returned home last night in a nervous state. According to Mrs. Johnson, her husband was held up Wednesday morning in Dormont by a gang that took his money, $35, and his automobile.

Then, Mrs. Johnson continued, he was forced into the bandit car and driven to Akron, where he was told to board a train for Pittsburgh, and continue on to Baltimore. All of which Mr. Johnson did, Mrs. Johnson said.

Where did Mr. Johnson get the money for train fare? Why, the bandits furnished it, Mrs. Johnson said.

M. E. Ministers Make Own Code On Salaries

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Ministers of the Erie annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church wrote a NRA code for themselves at their meeting here yesterday.

Of course they didn't pay any attention to minimum hours of work, but they did establish a $1,200 annual minimum salary for pastors in the conference.

Ministers in the higher salary brackets and the larger churches are to be "taxed" apportionately to enable churches now paying less than the minimum to meet the $1,200 salary requirement.

EX-CLERK HELD ON NEW CHARGE

Paroled recently in Criminal Court on a charge of embezzling public funds, Paul Orris, former East Pittsburgh borough clerk, today awaited grand jury action on another charge—that of fraudulent conversion—filed by a taxpayer.

Orris was held for court last night by Justice of the Peace George B. Shields, of Wilkinsburg, on information made by Harry C. Clark, of 329 Beech street, East Pittsburgh. The amount involved was $467.50, Shields said.

Orris was paroled by Judge Samuel H. Gardner after he pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge.

GIRL REPORTED KIDNAPED

McKeesport police today were investigating the reported kidnaping of a 15-year-old high school girl in the heart of the city's business section by two men late yesterday.

Lillian Ross, 15, a McKeesport high school sophomore, told police that she was en route home from school with a companion last night when the girl, walking about a block ahead, was dragged screaming into the machine.

A bareheaded man sat at the wheel, she said, and another man wearing a hat stood at the door of the machine, which was parked with the front wheels on the sidewalk.

Police had not been notified of any missing girls in the district and the search for the kidnap victim was hampered by a lack of identification, they said.

Won't Pay, Claire Insists, Hinting Flight Abroad

Universal Service.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The London Daily Mail today quoted Claire Windsor as stating she will "beat it" to England rather than pay the $75,000 verdict returned against her in an alienation of affections suit.

The Mail quotes Miss Windsor as stating in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation from Los Angeles:

"Until the question of a retrial is settled I am all right here. Then, if they start chasing me for the money, well, I'll beat it for your country. I am not going to pay."

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—(Universal.)—Claire Windsor gained a temporary victory yesterday in her fight against paying the former wife of Alfred C. Read, Jr., erstwhile San Francisco-Oakland broker, the $75,000 damages awarded by a jury for alienation of his affections.

Leonard Wilson, representing the blonde stage and screen actress, won a stay of execution dating 10 days from a hearing on motion for a new trial and reversal of the verdict. Superior Judge J. P. Sproul did not set a date for the hearing.

Counsel for Mrs. Marian Y. Read, socially prominent in Oakland, said they would bitterly fight any attempt to prevent their client from losing the judgment voted by a jury of seven men and five women.

Thousands Pay Tribute To Victory of NRA In Parade Here

that emblem is the Blue Eagle of recovery.

The little employer's float moved together with the gorgeous contribution of the big corporation. The worker stepped side by side with the consumer, and the employer was there, too, hundreds strong.

Nothing was missing: Grocery stores, department stores, the great factories that have made Pittsburgh the workshop of the world, breweries, bakeries, the newspapers, veterans' groups, boys' organizations, the women's Consumer League, fraternal orders, and heading the parade were the men responsible for the NRA's progress here.

Former Gov. John S. Fisher, grand marshal of the parade; Mayor John S. Herron, honorary chairman of the local NRA committee, and Frank C. Harper, general secretary, were in the vanguard.

FORESTERS IN LINE

Symbolic of what has happened in the life of this nation was a large detachment of youths from the Civilian Conservation Camps.

Then along the march were Col. W. R. Dunlap, chief of staff of the parade officialdom; Col. Eric Fisher Wood, heading the military division; Col. Franklin Blackstone, in charge of the civic division, and many, many others. They seemed to like this war on depression.

No doubt was left that this was a "war" parade when the rumbling caissons of the artillery units moved into sight. The uniforms of the massed soldiery only added weight to this fact.

MILITARY DIVISION

In the military division were the One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery, the Twenty-eighth Division Signal Corps, the Reserve Officers and the Naval Reserve, mounted squads of the One Hundred and Seventh and One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery.

All very army-like, but laughing and yelling not for blood, but for the pure fun of throwing aside the morbid thoughts of a downward business retreat and moving determinedly to the advance.

The soldiers were in front, but the army of organized labor presented a staunch rear guard. They were from every field of work—miners, metal trades, printers, railroaders, brewerymen, cooks, dyers and cleaners, boilermakers, builders, letter carriers, carpenters, candy-makers, bill posters, the Teachers' Protective Union, teamsters.

IN SECOND DIVISION

Comprising the second division were the Shriners, insurance men, Boy Scouts, Kay Community Drum and Bugle Corps, Postal Telegraph boys, American Legion groups, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Swift Mission Brigade, Company G, United Boys' Brigade; Civilian Conservation Corps, Women's Consumer League, Salvation Army Placement Bureau and a marching body from the H. J. Heinz Company.

Then came members of the Restaurant Association of Western Pennsylvania, a delegation from Dutch Henry's, the Hat Cleaners' Association.

In the commercial and industrial division were Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Westinghouse Airbrake, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, P. H. Butler Company, Kroger Grocery and Baking Company and the American Oil Company and scores of others, all with hundreds of employe-marchers.

The entire fourth division was composed of labor organizations, marching and riding, thousands strong.

1,000 Firms Participate In Ambridge NRA Parade

By MARGARET GARRAHAN

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Sept. 16.—As a shimmering mill sky glowed overhead symbolic of the Blue Eagle, NRA adherents paraded through the streets of Ambridge last night in a mammoth tribute to the New Deal.

Led by Harry Elder, marshal; R. A. Beyer, scout commissioner, and a squad of Ambridge motorcycle police, the queue of prosperity boosters marched for hours over a six-mile route.

James J. Boyle, chairman of the committee in charge of the event appointed by Borough Council, said nearly 1,000 business firms of the district were represented, each displaying its NRA emblem.

Colored floats flying blazing patriotic hues, topped by everything from clogging, chanting minstrels to a burial for "Old Man Depression" with flowers, dotted the parading ranks of civic, municipal and fraternal organizations . . . while hundreds of NRA-minded families participated in gaily colored automobiles. A street dance climaxed the festivities.

Because of the short time allotted for the staging of the spectacle, prizes were not on the bill.

"Matter" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is: "In God I will praise His word; in God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me."

The Story of Joseph -:- CHAPTER XI -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

When his brothers were ready to return home with their corn, Joseph ordered that the gold they had brought be put in the mouth of each sack, and that Joseph's own silver cup be placed in Benjamin's sack.

Joseph told his steward that the brother in whose sack his cup should be found must remain as his servant, but Judah pleaded with Joseph, saying that if Benjamin did not return, his father would die.

Then Joseph dismissed all his servants, and revealed himself to his brothers. He anxiously asked if his father still lived; then fell upon the neck of his youngest brother, Benjamin, and wept.

Pharaoh was pleased that Joseph had forgiven the brothers who sold him into bondage, and he offered Jacob and all his sons "the fat of the land" in Egypt; and so they returned to Jacob, their father.

CHAPTER IX.

"I'm Italian, and I'm not matchmaker, no marriage broker," chuckled Tony. "But what you need, Mr. Durant, is something friendly round the house. I'm telling you. When a lady throws a gentleman out on the curbstone, the blow don't do his head no good. He turns to liquor or hop or acting crazy. Then what he needs is not to fall in love with another gal, but to find some little dame that's kind of cozy, to drink his coffee with him in the morning."

"You should hold down a chair of philosophy, Tony," said Durant.

"All right, kid me, but I'm telling you. When a man has got the gate, that's the very time he should tie himself up with some loving little gal that don't want anything permanent. But you suit yourself. Anyway, be chummy enough with her to find out what you want to know about Mimi Montagne. Although you're way over my head. Gertie will spill all she knows at a word, but you say you want the stuff she doesn't know she knows. You're sure that's not a highbrow way of excusing yourself for getting too chummy with her?"

"What was it I called you this afternoon?" asked Durant blandly.

Gazotti pounded the table in an excess of glee. "Dirty-minded little rat—that was it, and damn if you don't go out of your way to remind me of it. God, I like you." His black eyes beamed on Durant. "All these mugs soft-soaping me and you—aw, hell, you're what you are same as I'm what I am. And the rest of the world are phonies and fakers and hypocrites. Well, anyway, take her home with you."

"We might have a talk later," admitted Durant.

Synopsis

Jackson Durant, young lawyer who has alienated the Park avenue set through his spectacular success as "an underworld mouthpiece," has been asked by Sue Leonard, society girl who jilted him, to "save" Thomas Siddall, youthful broker, to whom Sue is now engaged. Siddall, held on a murder charge, had been arrested, gun in hand, when his former sweetheart, Mimi Montagne, a Broadway night club singer, was shot dead on the terrace of a penthouse where Jim Crelliman was "throwing a party." Durant starts his own investigation. Tony Gazotti, grateful because Durant had saved him from the "hot seat" recently, agrees to help the lawyer. Tony meets Durant at the Pinnacle Club to plan contacts with possible witnesses. The lawyer is introduced to Gertie Waxted, the murdered girl's "closest friend."

Now Go On

Crelliman Followed

"Have you any?"

"Mighty little. He got up yesterday morning and had breakfast in his penthouse with Montagne. At ten-thirty he met Joe McCann. He was with him at McCann's speak on Fifty-fourth street. Fi Dollard blew in there. Ike Dolan did a little chatter with him. He met two government gents and slipped them a bundle of what it takes.

"He lunched with two of his boys—Frankie Bennings and Tim Carty—at Burney Thatcher's restaurant. With those two bodyguards he went up to the ball game. On the way back he stopped for a glass of beer at a Hundred and Twenty-fifth street; then he came downtown and dropped in at a movie, still with his bodyguards. Then he went back to the penthouse and didn't leave it again until the cops took him to Headquarters

t in the least, Tony," said

t.

"Then nothing will help," said Tony. "Like I told you this afternoon, that Siddall is guilty as hell."

"Maybe so; maybe so. A lot of people said the same thing about you, Tony, remember?"

Over Gazotti's olive face slipped a gray shadow; he shivered faintly. "I remember, all right; but I was framed."

Durant smiled at him quizzically; the little gangster stirred uneasily.

"You're not hinting that Siddall's been framed, are you?"

"Why does someone follow me to Miss Leonard's apartment and telephone me that if I interest myself in Siddall's case Miss Leonard may be killed?"

Imported Killer

Gazotti's red lips pursed in a soundless whistle. "So it wasn't the heebie-jeebies. You really meant it when you said she was in danger."

"How many times have you heard me say things I didn't mean, Tony?" asked Durant.

"You have been hitting it up lately, though," protested Gazotti.

Durant held out his hand; he spread the five fingers, then relaxed them. "Shaky?"

Gazotti shook his head. "You certainly can handle it," he said

Council Candidate Urges Tax Relief

M. B. Cull, candidate for Council, is running on a platform of relief for persons burdened with delinquent taxes.

M'ARDLE GIVEN OVATION AT MUSIC HALL

An audience which barely filled the first floor of Carnegie Music Hall, Oakland, last night listened to Councilman P. J. McArdle and four of his five councilmanic slate make a final appeal for votes in the primary election. The crowd was enthusiastic, making up in noise what it lacked in numbers, and speakers explained that probably the NRA parade had held down the attendance.

A substantial proportion of the audience was made up of citizens of the county outside of Pittsburgh, and though no county candidates slated by the Citizens' League spoke, a number were introduced. Among them were Judges Harry H. Rowand and Ralph H. Smith, Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidates for Common Pleas Court; Robert Cochrane, candidate for sheriff, and Mrs. Lois McBride and Gustav L. Schramm, candidates for Juvenile Court, a place for which the league has made no indorsement.

CITES SOLE ISSUE

McArdle was given an ovation by the crowd, and asserted the only issue of the campaign was the conflict of two thoughts of government, that represented by the regular Republicans identified with Mayor John S. Herron, Senator James J. Coyne and the Mellons, and that exemplified by the Citizens' League.

One, he said, represented waste, extravagance and corruption, while he and his fellow candidates stood for economy, efficiency and public responsibility. The organization, he said, had not fought for clean election laws, which the Citizens' Leaguers sought. He resented the endeavor of the organization to assume the sole label of Republicanism, and asserted the independents were much finer representatives of true party principles.

In measured tones, he said the attitude of the organization will kill the party here, as it has nearly done elsewhere, and that the government, public interest and duty to the people must come ahead of a mere party loyalty.

IGNORES MACKRELL

McArdle ignored Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell, third candidate for the Republican mayoralty nomination, as did every other speaker, including Leslie M. Johnson. Johnson last week gave out correspondence between the Citizens' League and Joe Engelsberg, Hill district character, reflecting upon Mackrell, and later was charged by Mackrell's friends with having indorsed him in 1921 after being fully apprised of the same charges which were published last week.

Johnson attacked Mellon-Coyne-Herron dictatorship in politics, and declared the present fight had begun with the uncovering of the Department of Supplies scandal in 1931 during the Kline administration. Edward O. Tabor, councilmanic candidate, said Johnson and his associates had spent $72,000 in pursuing the trail of alleged irregularities in that department.

Robert Waddell, Charles Wolff and Howard B. McNutt, other Council candidates, also spoke, and promised faithful public service if elected. Former Mayor William A. Magee, who indorsed McArdle in a surprise move last Wednesday, did not attend the meeting last night.

Between speeches an orchestra entertained the audience.

County Board Backs McBride, Snubs Piekarski

The Board of County Commissioners, through Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, last night indorsed Mrs. Lois D. McBride for Juvenile Court. McGovern, in his speech, said he was speaking in behalf of the entire board, and was making his only speech of the campaign.

The political high spot of McGovern's talk, however, was his failure to indorse Judge Frank Piekarski, candidate for County Court. Judge Piekarski was appointed to County Court by Gov. Pinchot, whom McGovern has followed for years, and it is known Pinchot is intensely interested in the election of Piekarski, as he is in every man he appoints.

The omission of Piekarski's name was the more marked because McGovern asked for the election of Judges Ralph H. Smith and Harry H. Rowand to Common Pleas Court, and Benjamin Lencher to County Court. Judges Smith and Lencher are Pinchot appointees.

McGovern said Mrs. McBride had proven her fitness for Juvenile Court through long training as a social worker. He said that the election of Mrs. McBride would make the Commissioners certain that the $700,000 annually spent by the court would be honestly expended. He said:

"She has spent 20 years in social work among the poor and distressed, and she knows better than any of her opponents just what kind of administration Juvenile Court needs. Mrs. McBride is the only candidate with practical experience in the field covered by the court.

"As an attorney she has handled upward of 1,500 cases of delinquents just above Juvenile Court age, with only 14 or 15 of these individuals coming back into court for a repeated offense."

Father Cox Lauds Evans as War Buddy

Assistant United States Attorney Raymond D. Evans, candidate for Common Pleas Court, was characterized by the Rev. Father James R. Cox, as a man "eminently qualified" for service on the judicial bench, in an address last night. Father Cox said Evans was "a former World War buddy of mine."

Nixon Scheduled For Four Speeches

Attorney Clarence B. Nixon, candidate for County Court, will speak today at Indoor Dart Baseball Club, Homestead athletic field; Snodgrass School reunion, Scott Township, Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport, and before the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Wilkinsburg.

Paraguay Claims Important Victory

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 16.—(INS.)—The Paraquayan war office today announced receipt of a communique from Campo Aceval stating Paraguayan forces had defeated Bolivians in a decisive encounter in the Chaco region, taking 850 prisoners and killing and wounding many others.

Col. Montalvo was among the Bolivian dead, the communique stated.

Cavanaugh Urges Unbossed Sheriff

Citing the part the sheriff's office plays in law enforcement, Thomas J. Cavanaugh, candidate for sheriff, asked voters to relieve the office of political control, in addresses yesterday.

Detailing his police experience, Cavanaugh said there were no racket murders during the three years he headed the vice squad.

LEAGUE-COYNE PACT HELD JOKE

One of the best pieces of humor in the campaign is the charge that the Citizens' League has secret alliances with the Mellon-Coyne organization, Francis S. Guthrie, nephew of former Mayor George W. Guthrie, declared in an address last night. He said:

"In the league are men and women who helped depose the Kline administration, sponsored by Mellon and Coyne, and who advocated city manager government and election law reform, defeated in the Legislature by Mellon and Coyne. It would seem the secret alliance did not function very effectively."

Guthrie attacked Mayor John S. Herron for his promise to "run the city as it has been run." Obsolete and wasteful practices, he said, characterized the city government.

Guthrie urged the election of P. J. McArdle, Independent Republican candidate for Mayor, and his councilmanic slate.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Arraignment in Superior Court of Miss Wilhelmina Weltz, on a charge of murdering Francis J. M. Grace, retired capitalist, has been set for September 22.

Second Payroll Levy Charged By Mackrell

The "gang" has made a second assessment on city employes, Thursday night having been the deadline for the payment of contributions, Joseph N. Mackrell, Progressive Republican candidate for Mayor, charged last night.

Speaking at East End school and Italian-American headquarters, Liberty avenue, Mackrell cited the alleged assessment as proof of the "gang's" desperation.

He attacked the administration, because, he said, it was denying support to Judge Frank A. Piekarski.

Expressing his confidence in a promise of the United American Veterans' Association to assure an honest election, Mackrell reiterated his opposition to "the Mellon-Grundy-Coyne machine."

Mackrell and other Progressive Republican candidates will speak tonight in Thirtieth Ward Progressive Republican headquarters, 105 Bausman street, Knoxville.

CAIN HITS STATE POLICE CALL

The importation of state police to guard the election, was attacked by County Treasurer Robert S. Cain in an address last night. Cain said:

"Such trickery as the bringing in of six state policemen when they were not needed at all except to be photographed so that the illustrations could be interpreted as indicating the city police force was powerless to prevent imagined election crookedness—must be exposed.

"What could half a dozen state police do to forcibly take over the work of our entire police department?"

HERRON RECORD DEFENDED

The record of Mayor John S. Herron, Regular Republican candidate for Mayor, does not need the support of sensationalism, Mrs. Garnet Drake said in an address yesterday.

Mayor Herron's candidacy has been indorsed by Cleaners' and Dyers' Union No. 18,300, and by the South Hill's Italian Club.

The club will hold a mass meeting in honor of Mayor Herron and of Judge M. A. Musmanno, candidate for Common Pleas Court, whom it has also indorsed, at 500 Brownsville road, tomorrow afternoon.

M'NAIR LINKS TAXI SYSTEM, CAR 'TRUST'

The Parmelee taxi system is a "little brother of the trolley trust," William N. McNair, candidate for Democratic mayoralty nomination, declared last night. He told an audience in St. Michael's auditorium:

"The only way to beat the transportation trust is to own your own car—or walk."

Street car fare is almost double that of other cities, bus fare is a quarter to other cities' 10 cents, and no other city in the county has such high taxi rates, McNair said.

USE MELLON GASOLINE

The Parmelee Company purchases its gasoline from one of Mellon's companies, McNair commented, suggesting that "the taxi monopoly" needed investigation.

Mrs. Ida L. Allen, former Democratic member of the Pittsburgh Registration Commission, has indorsed McNair and his ticket.

McNair and candidates and supporters of his ticket will speak tonight at East End headquarters, 6308 Frankstown avenue.

MEETINGS SET

Other Democratic meetings are scheduled at Democratic headquarters, Magee Building, at noon; Politico-Civil Club, 4267 Second avenue; Cheswick Public School, Cheswick; Mariner Hall, Lincoln avenue, Bellevue, and Ellroy School, Brentwood.

The ability, honesty and understanding of Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for Common Pleas Court, were praised by Maj. R. M. Keogh, executive secretary of the Disabled American Veterans, in an address at Hampton Township last night.

Lindsay has been indorsed by the Dormont Republican Club.

He will speak tonight at Moose Temple, McKeesport; Liberty Political Club, Liberty Borough; Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport, and the playground in Twelfth street, McKeesport.

Alexander H. Lindsay will speak in his father's behalf at the Whitaker community picnic, Locust Grove, Mifflin Township, and the American Slovak Association, Slovak clubroom, Glassmere.

MACHINE KEEPS INDUSTRY OUT, SAYS HENRY

Political machines discourage the coming of industry to Pittsburgh, John M. Henry, candidate for Democratic mayoralty nomination, declared in an address at Carrick School last night.

Before locating a factory in a new center, a business must consider, Henry said:

"What are the chances of a reduction in government cost? Are housing conditions such as to make employment in the town attractive? Has racketeering risen to proportions where it threatens to encroach on legitimate business?

"The answer to every one of those questions, under the present conditions of Pittsburgh's machine government, is discouraging."

Calling for a business administration, Henry said:

"The business manager is thinking how to produce a maximum result with a minimum expenditure. The political organization is scheming how to save the most jobs for its followers."

NOTICE

In accordance with the authority vested in them by law, the Pittsburgh Registration Commission will hold hearings on Thursday, September 14th; Friday, September 15th; Saturday, September 16th, Sunday, September 17th, and Monday, September 18th, with respect to irregularities in registration. These hearings will be held in the office of the Commission, Room 116, Court House, Pittsburgh.

Remember the Past Vote for the Future

At next Tuesday's Republican Primary the voter must consider three tickets.

The Past

Two of the tickets stand for a continuation of Boss rule and the machine system of city and county control. Such a system lives by the patronage-and-spoils method of mulcting a city's finances and misusing its departmental machinery. Such a system is arrogant toward the individual and scornful of the people.

Its attitude may be summed-up in: "The people be damned!" "To the victor belong the spoils." It wins elections through fraud, trickery, manipulations and thuggery. Pittsburgh is familiar with it all—and with the corruption which follows.

The Future

The third ticket, the Independent Republican Ticket, stands for decency, honesty and efficiency in government. It is unbossed. It is Machine-Free. It favors full publicity and audits in all city departments. It pledges complete divorce and all employes of other city departments from political control. It promises to serve the people and to advance the general welfare—and to do so free from any invisible influence or direction.

Its attitude toward the people may be summed-up in: "The Public Interest First!" This third ticket must win elections through the interest and concerted action of hopeful, honest and earnest voters. Those who Remember the Past and then Vote for the Future must concentrate their votes on one ticket . . .

Federation Delegates To Be Given Choice Of 2 Auto Tours

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Bit by bit, like a jig-saw puzzle, plans for the State Federation convention are being shaped into a completed whole. Those who remain over Friday of convention week (October 9-13) will find themselves faced with a choice of two tours on this, the annual play day. Mrs. H. D. Stark, first vice president of the Congress of Clubs, and Mrs. R. W. Johnston, past president, and their aides have planned a north and a south tour for the entertainment of the visiting clubwomen.

Both motorcades will leave the William Penn Hotel (convention headquarters) at 9:30 in the morning, the "north party" going first to the Allegheny Observatory, then to North Park, back through the Fox Chapel district, and over Washington Crossing Bridge and to Falk School, viewing the city from Schenley Heights, then down through Schenley Park, to the Boulevard of the Allies and so to South Park.

There they will visit the Old Stone Manse which the Allegheny County Federation has furnished. If the weather is fair, the party will have a box luncheon in the park. Otherwise the trip will continue to Chatham Village and the luncheon will be served at Congress House.

The south tour route is to Falk Clinic over Bigelow boulevard, with a stop off at Carnegie Institute, through Schenley Park to Mrs. Nathaniel Spear's garden, then over Woodland road, to Wilkinsburg, thence to the County Airport over the Westinghouse Bridge, finishing at South Park with the other party.

Congress Group Hears Judgeship Candidates

All the candidates for the Juvenile Court judgeship, with the exception of Charles G. Lane, Jr., from whom no reply was received, were present yesterday at the luncheon given by the Congress legislative department of the Congress of Clubs. Each candidate announced his or her platform, Mrs. Oliver J. Haller, Congress president, introducing them.

Mrs. Haller called attention to the fact that the Congress is a non-partisan, civic body and especially interested in Juvenile Court affairs.

Having begun the new season with a basket picnic early this month, the Triangle Club, of Wilkinsburg, will proceed to its regular program meeting on October 5. Again the women will have a miscellaneous program, with talks by several visitors, including Miss Janet Forbes, of the Rieck-McJunkin Company, and C. H. Lehmann, of McCann's.

A variety of interests will be discussed by the members themselves, among those topics being "A Foreign Home as Seen Through an American Eye," "Education of Helen Keller," "International Date Line" and "The Value of Reforestation."

Bridgeville Club Presidents' Day October 3

The twenty-third annual programs of the Bridgeville Woman's Club have been distributed among the members. They announce a reception for Mrs. James L. Wible, who has accepted the presidency for the second time. This on October 3. A country fair at the clubhouse is another October event. Later in the year are a talk by Attorney Ella Graubart, a trip to the Cathedral of Learning, a kitchen shower, a special Christmas program and a junior guest night, which brings the club to its birthday party in January.

After that the calendar tells of a reciprocity program with the Monday Club of Carnegie, a "Survey of Europe Today," by the Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, a tour to the Workshop for the Blind, a colonial tea, a home and garden program, a travel day, a child health program, a mother and daughter meeting, the June outing and the September flower show.

Following a meeting of Syria Ladies' Social Club next Saturday in Syria Mosque, a program of entertainment will be given. Dorothy Mussler, soprano, and Catherine R. Smith, contralto, will be accompanied by Selma Brandt, who will also present piano solos, one of them being her own unique arrangement of "Swanee River."

Marianne Rohrkaste will do some original dances and Hazel Lawrence, reader, and Ruth Behringer, violin, will complete the program.

October 6 is the date set for the opening of the Oakland Woman's Club, which will have semi-monthly meetings from that time until June, when the outing closes the year. The club does not hold its president's day until May. The annual Christmas party and Toy Mission day is dated for December 15.

* * *

The wives, mothers and daughters of members of the Lambskin Club, who comprise the La Wimoda Club, met Monday for the first time this season with the new president, Mrs. Joseph W. Brown, in the chair. A card party on Monday will be the first social event of the season. Mrs. Harry McCoy is chairman.

MODERN RAINCOATS DECEIVE BY RESEMBLING SPORTS COATS

THANKS TO the good sense of modern raincoat manufacturers, we no longer dread an announcement of impending showers. The cumbersome rubber coat, relic of past days, no longer hangs in the astute woman's closet, to be lifted from a hook with chagrin every time it rains. Instead, a smart woman slips into a supple coat, well-tailored, fashion-right in every detail, and all in all as much a thing of beauty as any other article of clothing she wears.

IT WILL probably be swagger in type. She could slip into it, rain or no rain, without hesitancy. If a day that starts out looking sultry winds up with the sun coming out in a burst of splendor before noon, she doesn't feel burdened with a cumbersome, clumsy raincoat. In fact, most people would never know the difference unless they actually examined the rubberized coat at first hand.

IT WILL undoubtedly be made of a fabric that faithfully copies sports materials. It might be like a Harris tweed, flannel, a suede, a novelty woolen, boucle tweed, check or stripe. Of the styles the belted model shares equally with the loose swagger type. A balmaccan, exact duplicate of the masculine coat, except for the buttons on the opposite side is one of those raincoats with an easy swing that you love to wear tramping in the country in the pounding rain.

THE BELTED front, loose back model is also popular, particularly those with double breasted closing and squared off shoulders. Wide armholes are a characteristic of good raincoats, to make wearing them over heavy clothes a simple matter. Collars show great variety. Rounded necklines, wide revers and capelets are smart.

BUT THE fabric tells the most significant story. Both raincoats in the sketch are outstanding fabric examples. On the right, a swagger model of black and white Harris-like tweed has a smart dropped shoulder that continues as a yoke across the back, with the check set in diagonally as a contrast. The check is double-textured, with a rubber surface between the tweed on the outside and larger plaid lining.

THE OTHER coat is a pure dye checked silk, utterly simple, in the smartest manner. This is a fashion that never seems to go out of date. From year to year the double-breasted raincoat, with slit pockets in the side, stays with us, for it is the type of coat that can always be worn with a feeling of correctness, no matter how style changes.

YOU'D NEVER dream how light in weight this silk coat really is. In all, it weighs less than one pound!

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Plaint

My nights are constant in their lassitude,
I know betimes the way that they will go;
A pipe relit—a silly book reviewed—

There was a spell I had no need for this,
A glass of wine, which stirs my memories so.
I read your eyes and found the answer sweet;
And wine enough was hidden in your kiss
To speed the hours by on dancing feet.

Now I am free—my key turns in the door,
No letter there in your familiar scrawl;
No phone call makes my heart pound any more,
But why go on—you're thru with me, that's all.

You've quite forgotten that we ever met—
And I've forgotten, too—how to forget.
—Don Wahn.

Really?

Nicky Blair, impresario of the Paradise on Broadway, also governs a Long Island inn. The other day he was dickering with a small-time orchestra leader to fill in for the fading season. It was one of those crews that worked for $390 a week and less.

"What kind of an orchestra have you?" inquired Blair.

"Same as Guy Lombardo," was the reply, "eleven men."

It Could Happen

And Izzy Elinson understands that kidnapers have snatched Peggy Joyce—and now are asking their friends for more money!

Squelch

Ted Cook relates the incident in a Hollywood story conference at which sat the producer, the supervisor, the director, scenario writer and the star.

It was apparent by the babel of voices that there was a difference of opinion. Suddenly the producer jumped to his toes, pounded the table with his fist, turned to the supervisor and shouted:

"Are you the producer?"

"No."

"Very well, then—don't talk like an idiot!"

Street Scene

Sign observed at 35th street and Park avenue: "No dogs allowed for any reason whatever!"

How to Lose a Job

Irving Hoffman says that when Drinkwater, the biographer of Abraham Lincoln, sat down to a similar task on Carl Laemmle, the movie magnate, it was the major topic in Hollywood.

One of the writers on the Laemmle payroll strolled into the Writers' Club there, and was buttonholed by a brother member. "In your opinion," he was asked, "which is the greater character — Lincoln or Laemmle?"

After looking about the place cautiously, the guy whispered: "Lincoln."

Whew!

Observed in a local sports page: "Yankees Cut Senators' Lead to 8½ Games!"

Almost feel their breath, huh?

Tip

Those gals who go in for extra work in Hollywood can thank Marc Lachman, of Universal, for this warning. He says the experienced girls who get $7.50 daily for extra work in movies try hard to keep the job for three weeks or more, while the newcomer uses her wiles and charms on studio attaches to get close-ups, and works for perhaps a day or two.

It appears that the extras who keep in the background of scenes are summoned back for similar scenes day by day. But those in close-ups are changed because the locale is invariably different and new faces are required.

In Fewer Words

A group of Dorothy Parker's applauders were gabbing about her genius again last night. The verdict was that most would give six of her funniest gags for this gem from her quill:

By the time you swear you're his,
Shivering and sighing,
And he vows his passion is Infinite—undying—
Lady, make a note of this:
One of you is lying.

One Man's Opinion

From Walter O'Keefe: In Cuba, first you run for President—then for your life! . . . When a woman gets $15 per week to sweep the house, she's a servant . . . When she gets nothing—she's a wife . . . Huey Long is jealous of the Mississippi River—because it has a bigger mouth than he has.

The Morning Mail

"Dear Winchell," write F. E. Foster, of Milwaukee, "not long ago you and Alexander Woollcott wanted to know the origin of 'Phoney.' The word was originally 'Forney,' the name of an Eastern manufacturer of cheap jewelry.

"When I was a kid in New York and Philadelphia and those spurious gem merchants made the rounds showing a piece of junk—we always said: 'Aw, that's a Forney!' Our snide way of saying it was cheap, false and counterfeit."

Form of Criticism

He is one of those pint-sized geniuses in Hollywood, who thinks a man is more important if he reads the big-word magazines. He is also the type of guy who feels miserable unless he is in the company of a bigtimer.

At a recent party he put on airs because he didn't think the guests were important.

"Who is that punk, anyhow?" someone asked the hostess.

"A phoney," was the answer, "who is so small in stature and mentality he has to sit on the floor to look sophisticated."

The Retort Proper

Jack Oakie was dining in a restaurant on the lot and after struggling with one of those steaks, the owner came up and chirped: "Well, Oakie—how did you like the steak?"

"It was good exercise," was the retort.

Nimble Nonsense

In Damon Runyon's "Lady for a Day" flicker, an excellent amusement, there is a delightful bit of repartee between a well-mannered butler and a sassy gangster. The latter, using second-rate chatter, threatens the servant.

"If we had a duel," snaps back the butler, "and I had my choice of weapons—it would be grammar!"

Diet of Stars Denounced

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 15.—Leave it to dynamic Grace Moore to burst a bombshell. The grand opera star makes the flat charge that the rigid diets of film beauties are responsible for half the divorces in Hollywood, and spread illness and marital discord all over the world. Scornfully, the blonde diva told me today:

"I a woman starves herself, and works hard all day at the studio, she has no energy left for her home."

What goes for Hollywood goes for everywhere else, declares Miss Moore, and she scores the cinema queens for beginning the fad.

"They wield such tremendous influence," she exclaimed, "Women all over the world have tried to mold their bodies after the starved silhouettes of screen stars, and much suffering has come of it."

And all this from a woman who is herself fashionably slender, 10 pounds lighter than when she made the movie, "Jenny Lind."

Just exercise, and don't eat foolishly, advises the diva. And not even her worst enemy would deny her terrific nervous energy.

Upon reading the NRA code designed to put more actors to work, W. C. Fields classically remarked:

"Things are getting so tough that you can't throw a dummy off a cliff anymore. You have to use an extra."

The merry eye of Maurice Chevalier has fastened upon blonde Toby Wing since his petite countrywoman, Jaqueline Francelle, departed Hollywood for the East. Toby, who has just received her diploma from the Paramount school, has been out with the French star for many consecutive evenings. And he's made her promise to learn French by the time he returns from Europe.

Rats in a War On Rackets In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

What David Wark Griffith did with "The Birth of a Nation," Cecil B. DeMille has done in the new film called "This Day and Age," using high school boys as his Klansmen to clean up the racketeers in a big city. It is a wildly improbable picture with highly melodramatic seasoning, but it keeps moving from first to last, and has some startling climaxes.

Mr. Seibel

When a high school tailor is shot by the big racketeer through a bucket of water, and the water flows through the bullet hole as the blood flows from the murdered man's heart, that is melodrama, but it is very effective. When the big racketeer is caught by the high school students and lowered into a deep pit filled with hungry rats, that too is melodrama, and its thrill is infectious.

Incidentally there is a trial in court showing how justice is defeated by the connivance and bullying of the servants of the law. The high school students who have been appointed judges and prosecuting attorneys for a day to teach them lessons in citizenship learn how the courts are used to protect gangsters. So they form an organization to clean up the racketeers, and it is done with true Klan technique, including a midnight parade to the judge's house and the court room to take the confession of the chief racketeer and murderer.

Griffith would say, "Well done, Cecil!" and join in the chorus of "John Brown's Body." Charles Bickford and Judith Allen did most of the important acting, but a little army of young people, screen star dust, play parts in the numerous cast.

Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly have an uproarious automobile comedy, while Mickey Mouse invents a mechanical boxing champion. So this is a week of thrills and laughs.

Fun, Mystery In Warner

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

You'll enjoy "Bureau of Missing Persons," film in the Warner, because it's funny and replete with human incident.

One after another you see them in Capt. Webb's office, people left behind, searching for someone. Lewis Stone, as Capt. Webb, receives them with kindly understanding. Not all the members of the Bureau of Missing Persons are tactful, though, for Butch, played by Pat O'Brien, constantly amuses the audience. He is a hard-boiled detective who is willing to bet "a dollar and six bits" on most anything.

The inevitable triangle appears when Butch, with his hat on, falls for a rather washed-out looking Bette Davis, who has come to the bureau to report the disappearance of her husband. But Bette, it turns out, has no husband and to make matters worse, she is wanted in Chicago for murder. She runs out on Butch who has gone "soft" on her, and he angrily vows to get even. The mystery is finally explained in a manner so incredible that it is termed a "pipe dream."

A series of little incidents, flashes into the work of the bureau, bring in tragedy, unhappiness, shame, humor, and even pathos. There is the little runaway genius who never gets a chance to "play like other boys" . . . the husband whose wife wouldn't realize their honeymoon was over after 10 years of marriage . . . Butch's wife Belle (Glenda Farrell) who keeps him in a frenzy and the audience roaring with her "Butchy-wutchy" until it turns out she is not his wife at all but the mate of someone else.

In addition to the main picture there is a sport film of the Ross-Canzoneri lightweight championship fight, which is enthusiastically received by the men.

Herbert Hoover Joins Repeal Ranks by Proxy

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Boston hotel man says Mr. Hoover was strong for repeal after Maine had shuddered like Gandhi in a northeaster.

This classifies Herbert as a reactionary clairvoyant gifted with the ability to foretell the past and reveal the present.

It qualifies him for the important post of rear chauffeur on a hook-and-ladder wagon to swing the tail where the head goes.

That was 'way back in September, 1932, and is indicative of the Republican policy of being strong for anything they couldn't avoid, postpone or merge.

"If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," is still the greatest of all political slogans.

In September, 1932, there was a cloud on the horizon no bigger than a bartender's hand. And no smaller.

And Mr. Hoover reached out and shook it.

Preparing for Program Needs

Here he is signing up with Fox Films for the first-run pictures of that company. Looking on are Ira Cohen and Edgar Moses, respectively, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia manager for Fox, and J. T. All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Odds and Ends

HERE IS a short, but absolutely true story of gratitude as it is sometimes practiced. Some years ago, a comedian who ranked very high in the business, advanced $2,000 to some relatives who needed the money for an undertaking in which they were just embarking.

The comic, then earning excellent money, never gave the matter a second thought. He saw his relations infrequently, and when he did meet them, they said nothing about the $2,000.

Times change, as times have a habit of doing. The comic slipped down the ladder, and found jobs more and more difficult to secure. A few weeks ago, he examined his bank account and found that there was about $100 between himself and starvation.

It was then that he decided to get in touch with his relatives. After all, they owed him $2,000—and they had done very well in their new business.

He wrote to them immediately, telling them of his present financial worries and requesting them to help him as quickly as possible. Three days went by, and he received a registered letter from his relatives. He tore it open quickly.

"We have not forgotten," read the note. "You heped us out when we needed it, and now we are glad to help you."

Attached was a $5 bill . . .

THEN there's the true story of the stingy actor who has always earned an excellent salary but is notorious for his desire to borrow from everyone. For years, in spite of his earning capacity, he has been panhandling his pals and requesting different sums "to help him out of tight places."

A short time ago, a producer received a wire from the actor.

"Send me $50 at once to pay my bill," it read. "The Hotel R—— is holding me and won't let me out."

An hour later, the producer sent the following wire to the ham:

"What are you kicking about, you sap? It's the best hotel you were ever in!"

AN elderly bum, occustomed to drink "smoke" and phoney alcohol these many years, recently left the Bowery and drifted uptown. He paused before the window of a class drug store, looked in, and then walked unsteadily up to the counter.

"I'm dyin'," he groad pathetically. "I gotta have a drink. If I don't get a drink I'll croak right here."

The proprietor, a sporty bird, didn't care whether the man was faking or not. He reached behind the counter, drew forth a pint of choice Old Crow and poured a stiff drink for the bum. The latter man drained the stuff eagerly—and then clutched at his heart. A surprised look came into his eyes and he toppled to the floor.

The druggist, frightened beyond words, jerked the bum's arms around for a short time and then hastily summoned an ambulance. He looked fearfully at the bottle of Old Crow behind the counter and wondered what had gone wrong. Beyond a doubt, the bum had been poisoned.

In a few minutes the ambulance rolled up and a young interne walked in. He listened to the druggist's story, took a long look at the bum who was lying inert on the floor and then walked to the rear of the store. He returned shortly with a glass and a clear fluid. He opened the bum's mouth and forced the fluid down.

Almost instantly the derelict opened his eyes and struggled to his feet. He looked around him, shrugged his shoulders and shuffled from the store.

"Good Lord," cried the druggist, "what a relief! I was certain he was poisoned. Tell me, doctor, what did you give him?"

The interne smiled.

"Water," he replied laconically. "The shock of that good stuff was too much for that bum. And all he needed was a chaser!"...

ALL of which reminds me that, while in the hospital, I learned the astounding fact that there are plenty of people who enjoy being in hospitals. They like the attention, the free meals, and other little things that they can't get at home.

The French Hospital, for example, has on its records a famous case of that type. A woman was brought into a ward, after claiming that she was possessed of pains that wracked her entire body. They took her temperature, and the thermometer registered almost 106.

For two weeks her case mystified the entire hospital. The finest doctors could find nothing wrong with her. Yet she complained continually of those mysterious pains—and her temperature was abnormally high. She generally fluctuated between 105 and 107. And you know what that means.

One of the internes finally grew suspicious and, while the nurses were taking the temperatures of all those in the ward, he watched the sick woman through the door. And 15 minutes later she was dressed and out of the hospital.

For the woman was simply a lover of hospital life. And as soon as the nurses' back were turned she quickly created a phoney temperature for herself by rubbing the thermometer vigorously on the bed clothes! . .

A FRIEND of mine was recently nailed for speeding Central Park. As the cop wrote out the ticket this gentleman leaned from his seat and gave forth cooing words.

"You don't want to give me a ticket," he said. "I know a lot of boys on the squad. I'm a pal of Lennon and Logan and Davis —and Sergeant Delaney.

At the mention of the last name the cop looked up.

"You know Sergeant Delaney?" he inquired.

"Sure do," replied my friend briskly. "Delaney and I are old buddies." He grinned affably and went just a little further. "As a matter of fact, we had dinner together only a couple of weeks ago."

The cop nodded and handed over the ticket.

"Delaney would be glad to hear that," he muttered. "He's been dead a year."...

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Cuba, you better hurry, and get a dictator, a president, a keeper, or something. For one more week is all you got to stay on the front page. When the Giants have won two games, Washington two, and Notre Dame backfield starts percolating, Cuba might just as well be Tasmania as far as the papers are concerned and that's what makes us a great nation, we take the little things serious, and the big ones as a joke. Many, many people out of work, some even in actual want, yet carrying on in confidence, and in hope, when the little fellow, that is actually in want, can have faith in his government.

Will Rogers

By golly, the big ones should certainly carry on, for they have never missed a meal so far.

Yours, WILL.

This Moment Not Brief

By MARY SHINE

"Brief Moment," in the Davis, isn't quite as abrupt as the title would have you believe—rather it's a series of prolonged interruptions, and very dizzying photography.

Abby Fane, torch-singer, weds Rodney Dean, playboy, to the horror of the ostentatious Dean family. Rodney's a wastrel, because of too much money and too little attention from his father. He is a disappointment to his wife, who expresses a desire for evenings at home by the fireside instead of in speakeasies—loud laughter at this point.

Abby tries to mend her husband's ways by getting him a position in his father's firm. But Rodney can't take it, and their marriage is on the rocks.

Then Rodney, determined to "make a man of himself," joins the long line of job-hunters, and changes his name, but discovers that work is scarce for a John Doe.

But, good old Rodney! he crashes through at last (now you knew he would all the time), and the world begins to brighten for him and Abby. Carole Lombard is the gold and white Abby and Rodney is Gene Raymond.

Life's Sweep On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"I Loved a Woman," Stanley episodic film that is a sort of "Cimarron," giving Edward G. Robinson chance for an excellent characterization, from dandified and idealistic youth to senile and regretful old age, would be better titled "I Loved Three Women." They are Genevieve Tobin, the girl who becomes his wife; Kay Francis, the girl who fills him with ambition and turns him from an art-lover and dreamer into a go-getter, and Fortune, the fickle dame who rightfully can be called "Miss" in this case.

All three fail him in his moments of greatest need. His wife even fails him twice, for had she been of a nature to arouse him just enough to keep him from being a sap in the matter of business, but still humane enough to temper his idealisms with sense, there might have been no interloper, no self-exiled old man in Athens wishing that he had not fled from an indictment in America, but had remained to face it, for the reason that, above all else, it was home. Has an Insullish sound, hasn't it? But, alack, had that been the case there would have been no drama.

"I Loved a Woman" is a combination of much that has made Chicago a matter of headlines in the last 50 years, a story of the packing house aristocracy, the interest of the millionaire in opera and opera singers, the "embalmed beef" scandal of Spanish war days, the enormous fortunes created by World War contracts, the cornering of grain, the effort to avert wreckage in the sudden stoppage of income at the end of the war by diverting funds, and finally the looming of the grand jury.

Starting slowly, with Robinson on vacation in Europe, becoming head of a great packing concern through the death of his father, it gains momentum when a singer he has befriended makes him see that he is too soft for his own good. As he is on the brink of being absorbed by a stronger firm, a big change in five years, he realizes the truth of her words, and makes an alteration. As a result he goes up and up and up, until the pyramid topples of its own weight.

The work of Robinson is a lesson in acting, as he changes from a nice, humane, likeable chap to a ruthless Napoleon of business, then to fear-haunted man whose wife leaves him, after waiting 20 years for her moment of revenge, and finally to a tired old man, back in Athens, scarcely able to remember the singer who helped in his downfall after he had given her the financial aid she needed as a student.

The latter part is the nice smooth portrayal of Kay Francis. Both she and Miss Tobin are perfection in their parts, but the picture is virtually all Robinson.

TENSE MINERS AWAIT CODE SIGNING

Connellsville Coke Area Idle; Pickets Keep to Posts

Fayette and Westmoreland counties, which had operated up to today, were closed this morning by orders from the Frick Company offices at Scottdale.

The statement said the action was taken to "save trouble" and that the mines would remain closed "until we feel we can operate with satisfaction and protection."

PICKETS ON JOB

The mines closed today were the Trotter, Leith, Crossland, Kyle, Leckrone and Ronco, all in Fayette County, and the Southwest No. 1 and Morewood, in Westmoreland County.

Picket lines were set up throughout the district, but only small groups congregated. It was generally conceded that none of the mines would operate today, most of the busier pits being on a five-day week schedule.

Nevertheless they were out, these determined "holiday" pickets—determined to stay out until the code is signed.

News of the code's preparation for the President's signature provided the only excitement of the morning. Eagerly the miners listen to the long schedule of rates and district differentials in the Johnson code.

'TOO MUCH FOR THEM'

The complications of minimum rate and differentials, total work hours of 57½ for Pennsylvania; 54½ for Northern West Virginia; 57 for Indiana; $3.75 a day minimum for skilled labor in Missouri; $5 for Illinois, and $4.20 for Pennsylvania are too much for them.

Puzzled they scan the table of wage and hour provisions of the proposed code. They would prefer something easie to understand and their blank faces ask each other:

"Is it all right?"

They don't want to be fooled.

The 24-hour period allowed by the President for the signing of the code has ended. There have been other codes presented before, but always there is some delay—some unexplained stumbling block to be encountered before the big coal barons have signed on the dotted line.

BLACK AND WHITE!

Their attitude was expressed by one holiday picket in these succinct words:

"Let them get it all down in black and white and then get the big boys to put their names on the dotted line."

That they will get full recognition of the union in the code is a foregone conclusion among the miners. They have that much faith in President Roosevelt and the administration. They say:

"Roosevelt won't let us down. He promised us something and he's going to deliver."

Their faith in the man in the White House and his promised "new deal" is almost a religion to the miners.

POLICE ON DUTY

State police patrolled the district as usual this morning, but not a single instance of violence was reported. Company deputies guarded all of the Frick company plants, but kept themselves confined for the nonce on company property exclusively.

Meanwhile three separate investigations into Thursday's shooting of 16 men at Gates and numerous other disorders in the district which resulted in 20 men, all told, being sent to doctors' offices and hospitals for treatment, are under way. Three Federal Department of Justice agents had completed their interrogation of witnesses and participants late yesterday and were on their way to report personally to President Roosevelt today.

'LET 'EM HAVE IT'

Among those questioned by the federal agents were company officials, including Supt. Mike Deneavan, who allegedly gave the order to the deputies to

"Open fire and let 'em have it."

Company officials declared the pickets invaded company property and threatened bodily harm to nonunion workers attempting to get into the mine.

The miners say they were fired upon without provocation. They say they were on a railroad right-of-way and not company property. Most of the victims fell on the tracks. Company officials say they ran off the property to the tracks where they fell down.

STATE, COUNTY PROBES

The other two probes, one by the county and the other by the state were progressing rapidly, the commonwealth's probers reporting to Gov. Pinchot and the county's to District Attorney Wade K. Newell. It was anticipated that several deputies and a Frick Company official would be charged with inciting to riot and felonious assault in connection with the shooting.

Allegheny County Miners Quietly Await Coal Code

Miners "on holiday" in Allegheny County were awaiting word from Washington that the coal code had been signed before ending their protest walkout and returning to the pits.

With virtually all major workings idle, no disorder was reported to the office of Sheriff Frank L. Gollmar. Westmoreland and Washington counties likewise were reported peaceful.

Officials of the United Mine Workers say they anticipate little delay in the men returning to work once the code has been signed and recognition granted to the union.

COMPLETE TEXT OF COAL INDUSTRY'S NRA CODE

ARTICLE I
Purposes

To effectuate the policies of Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the following provisions are submitted as a code of fair competition for the bituminous coal industry and upon approval by the President shall be the standards of fair competition for this industry.

ARTICLE II
Definitions

As used in this code the term "industry" as applied to the bituminous coal industry means the production and original sale of all kinds of coal (except anthracite), lignite, and the production and original sale of coke other than by-product coke.

The term "employer" includes any person employing labor in any phase of the industry.

The term "employe" includes all persons employed in the industry except members of the executive, supervisory, technical and confidential personnel.

The term "administrator" means the official designated by the President to administer the National Industrial Recovery Act.

ARTICLE III.
Maximum Hours of Labor

No employe shall be employed in excess of 40 hours in any calendar week after the effective date of this code. No employe shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours in any one day at the usual working places or otherwise in or about the mine, (exclusive of lunch period) whether paid by the hour or on a tonnage or other piece work basis.

There shall be excepted from the foregoing limitations (a) employes required because of accidents which temporarily necessitate longer hours for them; (b) supervisors, clerks, technicians and that small number of employes at each mine whose daily work includes the handling of man trips and/or haulage animals and those who are required to remain on duty while men are entering and leaving the mine.

The foregoing maximum hours of work shall not be construed as a minimum; and if at any mine a majority of the employed workers express their desire, by written request to the employer, to share available work with bona fide unemployed workers of the same mine, the number of hours work may be adjusted accordingly by mutual agreement between such employed workers and their employers.

ARTICLE IV
Minimum Rates of Pay.

The basic minimum rate for inside skilled labor and the basic minimum rate for outside common labor shall be the rate hereinafter set forth in schedule "A" for each district therein described for each such classification of labor, with the understanding that other classifications of employment will maintain their customary differentials above or below said basic minimum rates and that payments for work performed on a tonnage or other piecework basis will maintain their customary relationship to the payments on a time basis provided in said basic minimum rates.

ARTICLE V.
Conditions of Employment

A—Employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection. (2) No employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his choosing; and (3) employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay and other conditions of employment, approved or prescribed by the President.

B—In the submission or acceptance of this code the interpretation is adopted of the requirements transcribed in the foregoing paragraph (A) from section 7 (A) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, which was jointly announced by the Administrator and General Counsel of the National Recovery Administration on August 24, 1933, a copy of which is attached to this code as schedule (B).

CHECKWEIGHMAN

C—Except as otherwise hereinafter provided, all coal mined on a tonage basis shall be weighed and the miner paid on the basis of a 2,000 or 2,240-pound ton. The miners shall have the right to a checkweighman, of their own choosing, to inspect the weighing of coal; provided, that where mines are not now equipped to weigh coal a reasonable time may be allowed to so equip such mines; and provided, that in any case where rates of pay are based on any other method than on actual weights, the miners shall have the right to check the accuracy and fairness of the application of such methods, by representatives of their own choosing.

D—The net amount of wages due shall be paid semi-monthly in lawful money or par-check at the option of the operators. Any deductions from employes' pay, if not a matter of agreement, shall be in conformity with such general rules and regulations as the administrator may prescribe for the purpose of preventing unfair deductions, or those which may in effect lower the rates of pay herein provided.

E—Employes other than maintenance or supervisory men or those necessary to protect the property, shall not be required as a condition of employment to live in homes rented from the employer.

F—No employe shall be required as a condition of employment to trade at the store of the employer.

G—No person under seventeen (17) years of age shall be employed inside any mine or in hazardous occupations outside any mine; provided, however, that where a state law provides a higher minimum age, the state law shall govern; no person under the age of sixteen (16) shall be employed in or about a mine.

INVESTIGATION

As soon as possible after the adoption of this code, the National Recovery Administration shall undertake through a designated committee or agency, an investigation for the purpose of reporting on or before December 31, 1933; upon (A) the practicability and cost (assuming the maintenance of existing rates of pay) of applying to bituminous coal mining a shorter work day and work week, (B) the effect of an advisability of revising wage differentials in the various divisions and districts of the industry and, in the event of recommended change, specification of the amount thereof; (C) the sales prices obtained for coal, or reasonably to be anticipated, up to the time of the report, for the purpose of determining whether wages and employment can be further increased or maintained without imposing undue burdens upon the industry.

On January 5, 1934, there shall be held a conference between representatives of employers and employes operating under this code, together with representatives of the National Recovery Administration, for the purpose of determining what, if any, revisions may be desirable at this time of the wages, hours and differentials, or any other requirements of this code, on the basis of conditions then existing and the report of representatives of the National Recovery Administration made as hereinbefore provided.

Unless revised by mutual agreement, as the result of said conference beginning January 5, 1934, the hours of work, minimum rates of pay and wage differentials as set forth in this code shall continue in effect until April 1, 1934.

ARTICLE VI.
Unfair Practices.

Section 1—The selling of coal under a fair market price (necessary to carry out the purposes of the National Industrial Recovery Act, to pay the minimum rates herein established, and to furnish employment for labor) is hereby declared to be an unfair competitive practice and in violation of this code. In order to determine the fair market price, agencies shall be established, as hereinafter provided, and sales of coal at any time at a price less than a fair market price determined and published, as hereinafter provided, shall create against any person selling at a lower price a prima facie presumption that such a person is engaged in destructive price cutting and unfair competition. It shall be proper in determining such fair market price to take into consideration, in addition to the matters above set forth, also competition with other coals, fuels and forms of energy or heat production.

FAIR MARKET PRICES

Section 2—The fair market prices of coal of any grade and character referred to in the next proceding section, subject to the power of review hereinafter stated shall be

A—The minimum prices for the various grades and sizes in the various consuming markets which may be established for future application by a marketing agency or by marketing agencies, of whatever form or howsoever constituted, now existing or hereafter created or organized, acting for coal producers truly representative of at least two-thirds of the commercial tonnage of any coal district or group of districts, such minimum prices to be effective when and as announced as provided in Section 4 hereof.

B—The minimum prices for the various grades and sizes in the various consuming markets, where no such marketing agency exists, which may be established for future application by the respective code authorities hereinafter set up, for their respective areas, after having given consideration to the various conditions and circumstances entering into the sale of each grade and class of commercial coal produced in the district or group of districts it represents, such minimum prices to be effective when announced as provided in section 4 hereof.

C—As a basis for determining the fair market price to be announced and published, as provided in the two preceding clauses, the code authorities shall utilize the classifications of coals made by such agencies as are referred to in clause (A) of this section, and shall classify the coals in said districts not sold by such agencies and also the coals in said districts referred to in clause (B) of this section, to which the various prices apply. Said code authorities shall, at all times, provide and keep open an office during business hours to which any coal producer in said districts and any representative of the administrator may apply for information with respect to said classifications and prices.

MARKETING AGENCY

D—The term "marketing agency" or "agency" as used in this article shall include any trade association of coal producers complying with the requirements of a marketing agency and exercising the functions thereof.

Section 3—The fair market prices established for future application under the provisions of Section 2 (a) shall be reported to said code authorities by any such marketing agencies in such manner as may be required by such authorities.

Section 4—The fair market prices of bituminous coal, established as aforesaid by such agencies and code authorities shall be published on the effective date of this code, after approval by the presidential member of the code authority (acting under the direction of the administrator), who in his approval may permit a reduction or increase in said prices by action of said agencies or authorities within the limits which he may prescribe, and thereafter shall be published whenever any change is made therein, and not less frequently than once each month, and on the first of the month. Simultaneously with such publication, said fair market prices of bituminous coal shall be transmitted by the code authorities to the National Recovery administrator for his further review and subsequent action.

OPEN RECORDS

Section 5—Both the records and the data of such marketing agencies, and of said code authorities shall be open to inspection and investigation by any agent of the administrator whom he shall appoint for that purpose. Should such an agent of the administrator disapprove of any changes proposed in any fair market prices from these previously approved by the administrator as being in excess of any reductions or increases allowed in such approval, such changes shall not be effective unless and until the administrator shall approve of them.

Section 6—The consignment of unordered coal, or the forwarding of coal which has not actually been sold, consigned to the producer or his agent, is a violation of this code; provided, however, that coal which has not actually been sold may be forwarded, consigned to the producer or his agent at rail or truck yards, tidewater ports, river ports or lake ports and or at docks beyond such ports, but such consignments shall be limited to cover:

A—Bunker coal.

B—Coal for storage (other than in railroad cars) by the producer or his agent in rail or truck yards or on docks, wharves or other yards for resale by the producer or his agent.

Section 7—The adjustment of claims with purchasers of coal in such manner as to great secret allowances, secret rebates or secret concessions creates price discrimination and is a violation of this code.

Section 8—The prepayment of freight charges with intent or with the effect of granting a discriminatory credit allowance is a violation of this code.

Section 9—The giving in any form of adjustments, allowances, discounts, credits, or refunds to purchasers or sellers of coal, for the purpose or with the effect of altering retroactively a price previously agreed upon in such manner as to create price discrimination is a violation of this code.

INVOICE DATING

Section 10—The pre-dating or the post-dating of any invoice or contract for the purchase or sale of coal, except to conform to a bonafide agreement for the purchase or sale entered into on the pre-date is a violation of this code.

Section 11—Terms of sale shall be strictly adhered to; and the payment or allowance of rebates, refunds credits, or unearned discounts, whether in the form of money or otherwise, or extending to certain purchasers services or privileges not extended to all purchasers under like terms and conditions, is a violation of this code.

Section 12—An attempt to purchase business, or obtain information concerning a competitor's business by gifts or bribes, is a violation of this code.

Section 13.—The intentional misrepresentation of analysis or sizes or the intentional making, causing or permitting to be made or publishing, of any false, untrue, misleading or deceptive statement, by way of advertising, invoice, or otherwise, concerning the size, quality, character, nature, preparation or origin of any coal bought or sold, is a violation of this code.

Section 14—The unauthorized use, either in written or oral form, of trademarks, trade names, slogans, or advertising matter already adopted by a competitor, or deceptive approximation thereof, is a violation of this code.

BREACH OF CONTRACT

Section 15—Inducing or attempting to induce, by any means or device whatsoever, a breach of contract between a competitor and his customer during the term of such contract, is a violation of this code.

Section 16—Nothing in the foregoing sections of this article shall prevent any American producer from creating special prices for overseas exports.

Section 17—The splitting or dividing of commissions, brokers' fees, or brokerage discounts, or otherwise in any manner through sham or indirection the use of brokerage commission or jobbers' arrangements or sales agency for making discounts, allowances, or rebates, or prices other than those determined as provided in this code, to any industrial consumer or to any retailer, or to others, shall be a violation of this code.

Section 18—To sell to, or through, any broker, jobber, commission account, or sales agency, which is in fact an agent for an organization of retailers or industrial consumers, whereby they secure indirectly a discount, dividend, allowance, or rebates, or a price other than that determined as provided in this code shall be a violation of this code.

ARTICLE VII
Administration.

Section 1—For the purposes of administration of this code, the bituminous coal industry is hereby divided into five divisions as follows:

Division No. 1—Pennsylvania, Ohio, lower peninsula of Michigan, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Northern Tennessee, (including all counties not included within Division No. III), Virginia and North Carolina.

Division No. II—Iowa, Indiana and Illinois.

Division No. III—Alabama, Southern Tennessee, (including Marion, Grundy, Sequatchie, White, Hamilton, Bledsoe and Rhea Counties, and Georgia.

Division No. IV—Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Division No. V—New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and Arizona.

In each of the foregoing five divisions, sub-divisions may be established, as hereinafter provided.

Section 2—Divisional code authorities: For each of the foregoing divisions there shall be established within 10 days after the effective date hereof, or within such further time as may be permitted by the administrator, a divisional code authority, or subdivisional code authorities for the administration of this code within such division, either for the division as a unit, or for sub-divisions thereof, respectively, as may be determined. All the members of a code authority, except one (without vote and to be appointed by the President) shall be selected by an association or associations, or a committee of coal producers within the divisions or subdivision which shall be truly representative of the industry therein and impose no inequitable restrictions on admission to membership.

FULL REPORT

A full report of any such action taken to establish a code authority shall be made to the administrator and shall become effective upon approval by him. A subdivision shall consist of a geographical area within which all coal producers shall be entitled to membership in the association or committee establishing the code authority. The administrator shall have power to limit the number of subdivisions within a division and to determine any controversy arising in the establishment of such a code authority, and his decision shall be conclusive as to compliance with the requirements of this section and of the National Industrial Recovery Act in the initial establishment of such a code authority.

CODE AUTHORITIES

In the event that subdivisional code authorities are established within a division, such subdivisional code authorities shall establish a divisional code authority to exercise the functions hereinafter provided for a divisional code authority and any other functions which may be conferred upon the divisional code authority by the subdivisional code authorities, all in conformity with any rules and regulations prescribed by the administrator. One member of a divisional code authority, without vote, shall be appointed by the President.

A code authority shall administer this code in its division or subdivision and shall have the duties and exercise the powers which are conferred upon it in this article and Article VI of this code, and shall have authority to adopt appropriate by-laws, rules and regulations for the exercise of its functions.

Marketing agencies or trade associations may be established or maintained within any division or subdivision by a voluntary association of producers within any producing district therein, as such district may be defined by the code authority and function under such general rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the code authority, with the approval of the administrator, for the purpose of preventing any unfair practices, as defined in Article VI of this code.

REPORT COMPILATION

Section 3—Each code authority shall collect and compile any reports and other information required under the National Industrial Recovery Act; and in investigations of any complaint of unfair practices the presidential member of a code authority shall have power to require reports from, and shall be given access to inspect the books and records of producers within the jurisdiction of such code authority to the extent he may deem necessary for the determination of the validity of the complaint.

The expense of administering this code by a divisional (or subdivisional) code authority shall be borne by those subject to such code authority, each paying his proportionate share, as assessed, computed on a tonnage basis, in accordance with regulation prescribed by the code authority with the approval of the administrator.

Section 4—Industrial board. There shall be established within 10 days after the creation of the divisional code authorities a national bituminous coal industrial board, consisting of four members designated by the divisional code authority of Division No. 1, two members designated by the divisional code authority of Division No. 2, one member each designated by the divisional code authorities of Divisions Nos. 3, 4 and 5 and the five members of the divisional code authorities who have been appointed by the President. This board shall have the duties and exercise the powers conferred upon it in this code, or any revisions thereof, and particularly shall meet from time to time at the call of the administrator, who shall be ex officio chairman thereof, to consider and to make recommendations to the divisional code authorities and to the President as to any amendments of this code, or other measures which may stabilize and improve the conditions of the industry and promote the public interest therein.

LABOR RELATIONS

Section 5—Labor relations. (A) Any controversy concerning hours, wages and conditions of employment, or compliance with the provisions of Article V of this code, between employers and employes who are organized or associated for collective action shall, if possible, be adjusted by conference and negotiation between duly designated representatives of employers and such employes, meeting either in a mine conference or district conference or divisional conference, as the machinery for such conference may be established by agreement of the parties thereto; and it shall be the duty of employers and employes to exert every reasonable effort to establish such a machinery of adjustment and to utilize it to negotiate to a conclusion such controversies wherever possible.

B—Any such controversy which cannot be settled in the manner so provided and which threatens to interrupt or has interrupted, or is impairing, the efficient operation of any mine or mines to such an extent as to restrain interstate commerce in the products thereof, shall be referred to the appropriate bituminous coal labor board, established as hereinafter provided, and the decision of said board shall be accepted by the parties to the controversy as effective for a provisional period of not longer than six months, to be fixed by the board.

C—During the consideration of any such controversy either by the agreed machinery of adjustment, or by the bituminous coal labor board, neither party to the controversy shall change the conditions out of which the controversy arose, or utilize any coercive or retaliatory measures to compel the other party to accede to its demands.

D—If any such controversy shall involve or depend upon the determination of who are the representatives of the employes chosen as provided in Section 7(A) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the appropriate bituminous coal labor board, through any agent or agency it may select, shall have the power to determine the questions by an investigation and, if necessary, by a secret ballot taken under its direction.

LABOR BOARD

E—A bituminous coal labor board shall be appointed by the President for each division, except there shall be two boards for Division No. 8, to exercise the powers herein conferred upon it, which shall consist of three members, one to be selected from nominations submitted by organizations of employes within such division, one to be selected from nominations by the divisional code authority and one who shall be wholly impartial and disinterested, representative of the President. The expenses of such boards shall be met by equal contributions from the employers and employes nominating members, the amount and method of collecting which shall be determined by regulations prescribed by the President.

F—There shall be a national bituminous coal labor board composed of the members of the six divisional labor boards which may be convened upon call of the administrator in the event that:

1—A controversy involves employers and employes of more than one division, or

2—The decision of a divisional labor board affects operating conditions of more than one division either directly or because of its effect upon competitive marketing, or

3—In the opinion of the administrator the decision of a divisional labor board involves the application of a policy affecting the general public, or the welfare of the industry as a whole.

The national bituminous coal labor board may exercise all the powers conferred upon a divisional labor board, either in giving original consideration to a controversy, or in reviewing the decision of a divisional labor board, which may be either affirmed, set aside or modified.

ARTICLE VIII
Safety

Employers and employes shall co-operate in maintaining safe conditions of operation in compliance with the applicable requirements of state laws or regulations in conformity therewith.

ARTICLE IX
Amendments

Any code authority may propose amendments to this code from time to time effective generally or as to the area within its jurisdiction which, after submission to any other code authority affected thereby (which shall include the divisional code authority in case of an amendment proposed by a subdivisional code authority), may be recommended by the administrator for the approval of the President.

ARTICLE X

This code and all the provisions thereof are expressly made subject to the right of the President, in accordance with the provision of sub-section (B) of section 10 of the National Industrial Recovery Act, from time to time to cancel or modify any order, approval, license, rule or regulation issued under title I of said act and specifically, but without limitations, to the right of the President to cancel or modify his approval of this code or any conditions imposed by him upon his approval therof.

ARTICLE XI

Effective Date and Termination. This code shall become effective on the second Monday following its approval by the President, and shall continue in effect until April 1, 1934, and thereafter in the absence of the exercise of the power reserved to the President in Article X, subject to the exercise of the option, after 30 days' notice to the administrator, by any coal producer to withdraw his consent after April 1, 1934, to the further enforcement of the code to which he has voluntarily given his consent.

(Remainder of coal code text will appear in later editions.)

REVISED COAL CODE IN BRIEF

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The revised bituminous coal code worked out by Recovery Administration officials and the operators' committee of 16 today was described as a compromise.

Both the Recovery Administrator and operators yielded in an effort to win an agreement.

The Recovery Administration won its battle for a single code for the bituminous industry, but made a concession to operators by recognizing regional differences to a greater degree and providing a more autonomous government by the industry.

Under the new code a 40-hour week will be established in the industry, instead of the basic 36-hour week proposed by the NRA in the code handed the operators a week ago.

OTHER CHANGES

Other changes include:

Provision for sharing work modified in language, providing that if a majority of employed workers want to share work with unemployed, the mine management may adjust hours.

Basic wage rates provided for both the inside skilled labor and outside common labor.

The checkoff provision was modified to provide that employers shall pay workers semi-monthly in lawful money or checks. Any deductions from employes' pay shall be a matter of agreement and shall conform to rules fixed by the administration to prevent unfair deductions.

The child labor age limit of 16 is raised to 17 for those employed inside mines or at outside hazardous occupations.

Recovery administration is to begin investigation and report before December 31 on changes in hours and wages. Conference of mine owners and workers to be held on January 5, 1934, to consider report.

SUBDIVISIONS

Subdivisions within the five general divisions are established for administration purposes, a recognition of the demand of operators for varying rules to meet regional differences.

Divisional or subdivisional code authorities shall be chosen by coal producers, except that the President shall appoint one member.

A National Bituminous Coal Industrial Board of 15 members is created, which shall have power to recommend changes; four members to be from Appalachian field, two from Iowa, Indiana, Illinois field; one member each from Alabama, Missouri and Southwestern and Far Western fields, and five to be named by the President. Coal administrator to be ex-officio chairman.

Bituminous Coal Labor Board shall be appointed by the President for each of the five divisions of the industry, except that there shall be two boards in the Appalachian field. The board shall have power to make a decision settling any labor controversy for a six months' period. In addition a National Bituminous Coal Labor Board shall be named.

A provision was inserted permitting any operator to withdraw his consent to the code on 30 days' notice after April 1, 1934.

WAGE PROVISIONS

Minimum wage provisions follow:

Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, $4.60 a day for inside skilled labor, $3.60 outside common labor; Northern West Virginia, $4.36 and $3.36; Southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia, Northern Tennessee, $4.20 and $3.20; Indiana, $4.57½ and $4.20; Illinois, $5 and $4; Iowa, $4.70 and $4; Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, $3.75 and $3.28; New Mexico, $4.48 and $3.75; Southern Colorado, $4.44 and $3.75; Northern Colorado, $5 and $3.75; Utah, $5.44 and $4.48; Wyoming, $5.42 and 4.44 and 4.54; Montana, 5.63 and 4.82; Washington, $5.40 and $4.

Minimum wages not provided in the code are to be approved or prescribed by the President before the code is effective. Districts for which minimums are not fixed include: Panhandle district, West Virginia, and Somerset County, Pennsylvania; Preston County, West Virginia, Northern Tennessee, Whitley, McCreary, Belt and Harlan Counties, Kentucky; Warrick and Vandenburgh Counties, Indiana; Wayne and Appanoose Counties, Iowa; Western Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia and Southern Tennessee, North and South Dakota.

DYERS' STRIKE VIOLENCE RENEWED

Wilkinsburg Plant Wrecked; Truce Plans Pushed

Violence in the cleaners' and dyers' strike broke out again today as efforts to effect a settlement were in progress.

Strike sympathizers were blamed for the wrecking of the front of the Franklin Cleaners and Dyers, 702 Rebecca avenue, Wilkinsburg. The management, in reporting to county detectives, said the plant had been closed and they were at a loss to know the motive for the attack. Deputy sheriffs were detailed to the scene.

PROGRESS MADE

Miss Emmelinne Pitt, United States Department of Labor mediator, said that the possibility of reaching a tentative agreement in the week-old strike was more assuring than at any time during the conferences between plant owners and union representatives of the 1,400 strikers.

Miss Pitt was ordered here by Washington upon request of the union committee when the deadlock began, Thursday, over classification of the skilled and unskilled employes.

CHARGE VIOLATIONS

That plant owners flying the NRA were violating the maximum hour clause was charged yesterday by Selig Morov, president of the union. He claimed that operators who filed exceptions to the 40-hour week, demanding a 48-hour week be granted, were not privileged to operate under the longer hours until the exception was granted.

Approximately 25 per cent of the plant owners filed exceptions, according to W. J. Mooney, operators' spokesman. Adopting of the 48-hour week was permissible, he claimed, with the formal filing of the exception.

COLLEGE FETED BY METHODISTS

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church celebrated the 100th anniversary of its sponsorship of Allegheny College.

In 1833 the conferecne with financial aid enabled the institution to reopen after having closed because of lack of funds. Allegheny was founded in 1815.

A special service was held last night in the First M. E. Church to commemorate the occasion. Bishop Adna W. Leonard, of the Pittsburgh Area, was among the speakers.

Bogus Bills Found On Ship Engineer

SEATTLE, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Arthur J. Baird, 46, junior engineer on the liner President Jackson, was arrested yesterday after secret service operatives said they found 46 counterfeit $10 federal reserve notes on him.

He declared he had bought the notes in Hong Kong, they said. A note given to a storekeeper led to his arrest.

Patsy Scanlon Hurt When Hit By Auto

Patsy Scanlon, 38, of 7 McDevitt place, a former pugilist, was in Montefiore Hospital today with injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile in Forbes street near Atwood street, last night. It was believed later examination might reveal a skull fracture.

Election Supplies Delivery Under Way

Delivery of primary election supplies to various voting precincts in the county started today. In an unpretentious looking county truck, Harry Perkins, of 423 Second avenue, moved from the Court House yard with a load of ballots for East Pittsburgh and North Braddock.

Aged Man's Kin Sought by Police

Squirrel Hill police today sought relatives of a 73-year-old man who walked into the station house last night and said he was Fred Ellinger. He was unable to tell police where he lived.

HOLDS CORONER CHANGE NEEDED

The coroner's office needs a housecleaning, Dr. Vincent L. Marino, candidate for coroner, asserted in an address at Cheswick School, Cheswick, last night.

Marino attacked the incumbent, Dr. W. J. McGregor, for retaining Deputy Coroner Millard Leslie, saying:

"Leslie stands branded by McGregor as having the mind of a child and being insubordinate and disobedient."

Countess de Cavara Wins Back Her Son

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Countess de Cavara won back her 10-year-old son yesterday because Justice Joseph F. McGuire found the child had not been neglected, as charged by the Children's Society.

The boy, George de Cavara, had been under supervision of the society since August 3, when agents forced their way into the de Cavara house after neighbors complained that George virtually was a prisoner in his mother's home.

Glass Plant to Add 400 to Work Force

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 16.—Four hundred additional men will be taken on at the American Window Glass Company's plant in Arnold, according to announcement today as No. 2 furnace was lighted.

Flying Dove Visits San Francisco Mayor

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—A roving dove flew into a City Hall window and paid an official call on Mayor Angelo Rossi. Perhaps because the life of a mayor is never too peaceful, Rossi laid down his pen, sighed and then smiled, as the bird hopped onto his finger and cocked a friendly eye at him. He said:

"It must be a good omen."

BUY IN SEPTEMBER AND BUY AMERICAN

"Fill 'er up, Mister. I'M HELPING THE PRESIDENT!"

This is the seventh illustrated editorial—of a series now appearing in the Hearst Newspapers—on the importance of the Buy Now movement as a contribution to National Recovery.

You can do as Much . . . simply by BUYING NOW what you Need and Want!

MAYBE YOU HAVE NOTICED it at your favorite gas station. A Blue Eagle in the window. Another man or two on the job.

You get your gas and oil and a cleaned windshield—and get out on the road again a little faster.

You probably think it is grand. Why didn't we have this Recovery business before? It means that men go back to work—and customers get better service.

It's a swell idea all the way around!

But—stop and ask yourself this question: Who pays these men's wages? The gas and oil companies? Not by a long shot. All by themselves—they can't.

Because the companies that sell gasoline — like the companies that sell tires and cars—and shoes for you to wear — haven't any income except the money you spend for these things—the money you put in their till!

All the gasoline and tires and cars and shoes they make aren't worth a cent to anyone—until someone buys them.

And the men who sell the gas and tires and cars and shoes get their wages only because somebody comes in to buy! Somebody who has been fortunate in having a "job"—who may even have money laid away in the bank.

That's why such a man can help the President. That's why YOU can also. That's why you MUST if Recovery is going to succeed.

Because, what good will it do to have 2,000,000 men re-employed—if there's not enough business to keep them on the job? They'll just be back in the bread-lines again—and next winter there will be more drives for Relief.

YOU CAN SEE how it works—you can see how easily you can help. Out of every dollar you spend for gasoline, a part goes to pay the wages of the man who fills your tank.

Another part helps pay the railroad man who transported the gasoline.

Still another part helps provide employment for men in refineries, at the oil wells, on the pipe lines. And every dollar you spend is split up in the same way. It goes to make more jobs, pay more wages—in fact, to keep the country going.

Figure it out. It all comes down to this. When you scrimp and save and pinch your pennies, you are holding up Recovery by making less work for men with jobs—for new men recently employed.

When you spend sensibly and buy what you need and can afford, you're helping business to flow in the normal way and aiding in keeping re-employed men at work.

So it's obvious that your part in Recovery is a simple one—with a tremendous effect. All you have to do as an individual to help bring Recovery at the earliest moment is to SPEND—spend NOW—and spend in a normal way.

That's why we tell you to BUY IN SEPTEMBER.

Buy in September — because it's the normal time to stock up for the winter.

Buy in September—because the country needs stimulated buying at once.

Inspect your wardrobe now. What clothes do you need? What does the family need? Check up on the kitchen pantry. How about fuel for the season ahead? Lay in now the supplies and provisions you will need later.

The reason isn't so important. Action is. The man in the White House has set us all an example by doing things—FAST. Get busy yourself—BUY NOW!

MARSTON, DUNLAP CLASH FOR U. S. AMATEUR TITLE

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Flag Race Good as Over. Rebuilding of Yankees. Giants Clear Last Hurdle. Panthers Face Obstacles. Dukes Start Successfully. Fistic Financial Boners.

TERRYS CAN COAST IN AFTER DUAL WIN

The National League pennant race practically came to an end yesterday when the Giants mopped up both ends of that doubleheader in Chicago. Only a Cub sweep of the last-ditch series, or the capture of at least five out of six games, could have put the New York leaders under any serious pressure in the remaining two weeks of the season, and the Terrymen will be able to coast in now, following the important victories scored behind the great pitching of Hal Schumacher and Herman Bell, the latter in a relief role after Bud Parmalee had been lifted for the fifth time in his last six starts.

Hal Schumacher

The Giants probably will play all but a washed-out Cincinnati contest in their 154-game schedule, which leaves 15 events on their program. If they win only seven of the 15 they will be sure of the pennant, even if the Pirates win all of the 13 games remaining on Pittsburgh's schedule or the Cubs win all of the eleven games they have yet to play.

As usual, great pitching carried the Giants through safely in a time of danger. There's no beating a staff that has turned in 23 shutouts, 27 games in which opponents were held to one run, and 14 other contests in which the foe was held to two tallies, a total of 64 games this year in which only 55 runs all told were scored against the New York hurlers. Trimming the Cubs twice in one afternoon and holding them to one run and eight hits in a doubleheader on their own grounds, where they have been tough to beat, losing only 18 games out of 70, was one of the season's outstanding feats.

DUKE GRIDDERS OFF ON RIGHT FOOT

Both the local football season and the Duquesne University team got off to a successful start at Forbes Field last night, when the Dukes, meeting Waynesburg College for the first time since 1929, launched their sixth season under Elmer Layden with an 18-to-6 victory.

Naturally, the reconstructed Bluff machine is not yet functioning perfectly, but it will improve as time goes on. Better teams than Waynesburg must be met later, but the Dukes themselves also will be better than they were last night.

TEN YANKEES SAID TO BE ON WAY OUT

In the big job of tearing down the once great Yankee club and building it up anew for next season, no fewer than 10 of the present players are said to be ticketed for the gate, without counting Babe Ruth, whose status continues uncertain. Heading the list of the doomed, according to report, is Pitcher Herb Pennock, veteran of 21 major league seasons and never defeated in a world series.

Herb Pennock

Others said to be booked for release or trade are Outfielder Earl Combs and Sam Byrd; Infielders Joey Sewell, Frank Crosetti, Lyn Lary and Doc Farrell, and Pitchers Wilcy Moore, Danny MacFayden and Walter Brown. Present plans call for the shortstop job to go to Red Rolfe, of Newark, with Jack Saltzgaver, once tried as a second baseman, to be stationed at the third sack. Bill Heffner is to make a bid for the second base assignment, but American League critics think Tony Lazzeri will be right back at that post by reason of his hitting power.

JOCK HAS THREE SEASONS WITHOUT DEFEAT

It's a year of "first times" for Pitt in football. It's the first time in 20 years the Panthers have not done their fall training at Camp Hamilton, near Windber; the first time they have started a season without a captain either elected or appointed for the entire campaign, and now some of the more optimistic Blue and Gold followers are suggesting, with their fingers crossed, that 1933 may mark the first time since Jock Sutherland took over the coaching reins here that he has had two undefeated seasons in succession.

That is, undefeated as far as the regular season is concerned, for it will be remembered that an affair on the coast following last year's schedule was anything but a victory. Except for two other similar reverses in the Rose Bowl, Sutherland, in his nine years as head mentor at his alma mater, has turned out three teams that went through the regular schedule undefeated. They were the elevens of 1927, 1929 and 1932, though each ran into a post-season defeat at Pasadena. Jock missed out by one game in 1931. One game in 1927 and two contests last year were tied.

TOUGH HURDLES IN PATH TO CLEAN RECORD

The Silent Scot does not go out each year shooting for a season unmarred by a defeat or a tie. He feels that the caliber of a good football team is measured, not by the number of games it has won, but by its performances against elevens of equal strength.

There isn't a great deal to block the way to an undefeated season this year. Not much. Only such pushovers as Notre Dame, Minnesota, Navy and Nebraska. Just a breeze. Not to mention such elevens as Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, West Virginia and Wash.-Jeff. All of which schools not only are anticipating good teams, but will come up oozing fight, as any one of them would count its season a rousing success if a win could be chalked up against the Sutherlands.

ROSS DOES NOT REPEAT BONER OF KEARNS

They didn't know Barney Ross when they said he had pulled a financial boner in the Tony Canzoneri match this week by turning down an offer of 10 per cent and insisting that Canzoneri take the entire fighters' end of 52½ per cent and guarantee the champion a flat $30,000, the same sum that Tony received for the first fight in Chicago. As the gate exceeded $100,000, that would have meant a heavy loss to Ross. But it develops that in demanding the $30,000 guarantee, Barney also insisted on the alternative of the 40 per cent privilege, so he took the percentage in the end and didn't lose a dime through the arrangement.

Jack Kearns

It is recalled by Wilbur Wood that the booby prize for such dealings was won by Jack Kearns when the latter outsmarted himself while managing Jack Dempsey in the Georges Carpentier match at Jersey City in 1921. Tex Rickard gave Kearns his choice of a $300,000 guarantee or 40 per cent of the receipts. Kearns fell all over himself in his hurry to sign for the guarantee, thinking he was making a sucker of Rickard. As it happened, the fight drew almost $1,800,000. If he had gambled on the percentage, Kearns would have collected about $720,000 as Dempsey's share, so the boner cost him nothing less than $420,000.

MANAGER GEORGE GIBSON LEO NONNENKAMP JOHN CONNOLLY TOMMY PADDEN RALPH BRUBAKER RALPH BIRKOFER CLISE DUDLEY

Looking ahead to next season, the Pirates are set to try out new talent before the current campaign is concluded, now that the Giants are virtually in as winners of the National League pennant. Rookies and recalled farmhands are reporting daily. Above Manager Gibson is talking to a group of prospects at Forbes Field. Nonnenkamp is a young outfielder; Connolly a 20-year-old pitcher, of Duquesne, who won 15 games and lost 10 for Springfield in the Mid-Atlantic League; Padden is the catcher recalled from Albany in the International League, while Brubaker, third baseman, and Birkhofer, pitcher, have come back from Toronto. Dudley is the former major league pitcher, who has recovered from an arm injury and is trying to convince the Pirates he will be worth giving a contract. He saw service as a relief hurler against the Boston Braves yesterday, but failed to show much in his debut. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

BUCS TO FIGHT FOR RUNNERUP POSITION

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Forbes Field will see no more Saturday baseball this year after today, but the card for this afternoon is quite attractive even though it be devoid of pennant flavor. The Pirates and Braves are slated to mix in a dual bill, with play in the first game getting under way at 1:45 o'clock.

That the Giants practically clinched the National League flag by trimming the Cubs twice yesterday is the belief prevalent in the camps of the Pirates and Braves, but the competition for second place will go merrily on. The Buccos today had a slight edge over the Bruins.

In view of the nearness of the curtain, it is altogether likely that the Pirates and Cubs will be in the second and third notches when the season closes, but the winner of second money as between these two clubs would seem to be a tossup.

The Cardinals and the Braves may fight it out for the other money spot—fourth place. It would be quite a feather in Bill McKechnie's cap were his Tribe to finish in the select tier; moreover, it probably would mean some extra dough for the Wilkinsburg baseballer.

Bill Swift and Ralph Birkofer will do the twirling for the Buccos in the doubleheader of today. Skipper Bill expects to send Fred Frankhouse and Walter Betts to the slab.

The Braves gave the Pirates a real shellacking yesterday as they snapped the shutout streak the Buccos had plastered on enemy clubs in their three previous games. Rabbit Maranville broke the spell in the third inning when he scored the first tally charged against the Pittsburgh sharpshooters in 30 innings. Rab's run was the signal for an avalanche of tallies. The Braves made five in the third and duplicated this in the fourth. The score was 10 to 1.

Hal Smith and Clise Dudley were the victims of the big outbursts. Smith was shelled off the hill in the third. He was relieved by Dudley, formerly of the Dodgers and Braves, who as a free agent, has been trying out with the Pirates. Dudley has been troubled with a bad arm and his actions yesterday indicated his troubles were not over.

Southpaw Eddie Brandt had the Indian sign on the Pirates after the first round.

RACE CLASSICS ON TODAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Over a course soaked by two days of rain, 15 colts and two fillies sought the turf's richest prize, the $105,000 Futurity, at Belmont Park today. One of the most open races in the 44-year-old history of the classic loomed.

Sharing interest with the Futurity was the Jockey Club Gold Cup, where C. V. Whitney's mighty little chestnut, Equipoise, sought the victory that might carry him past Gallant Fox into third place in the world's all-time list of money winners.

In the Futurity, Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Brookemeade Stable entry of High Quest and Kepi ruled a 4-to-1 choice for the 6¾-furlong dash.

VETERAN MAX'S PLAY PRAISED BY JONES

By BOBBY JONES
(Only Golfer Ever to Win the United States Amateur and Open and British Amateur and Open Championships the Same Year.)

CINCINNATI, Sept. 16.—The big story of this United States amateur championship, which will be difficult for today's final to eclipse, has been the steady march of Max Marston through a brilliant field of youngsters into final round.

Bobby Jones

Marston has been brilliant at times, but he always has been good. Playing calmly and headily, his golf has been a little too much for his young opponents to handle this year.

MUNGER SHINES

Young Jack Munger, the Texas schoolboy, had covered himself with plenty of glory before yesterday. Throughout the qualifying and three tough match play rounds, the kid had handled himself like a veteran, and outplayed his every opponent. The impression made by his golf and demeanor had made him an even bet against Marston despite his youth and lack of experience. In the end, the greater knowledge and steadiness of Marston broke the youngster's game. But he made a great fight of it all the way. In a way, especially if he intends to continue competitive golf and give much attention to it, it is probably best that he did not win. He has gone far enough to make him henceforth immune to stage fright.

The match broke rather fast after the seventeenth hole. Munger, down at that point, had the advantage to the green. Marston chipped deftly and gained a half when Munger's putt from 12 feet stopped short.

Going to lunch 2 up after the kid had played the eighteenth green, Marston drew gradually away in the afternoon. He was aided by several partial stymies, but the deciding factor was his ability to keep the pressure on.

DUNLAP VICTOR

Strangely enough, the other semi-final between Dunlap and Little seemed to turn at about the same point. The two had been having a nip and tuck see-saw battle all the way, which was climaxed when each holed a good putt to halve the short sixteenth in par threes. But what seemed the turn came on the seventeenth and eighteenth. On the former hole Little was closer in three than Dunlap, who had been bunkered, was in four. But Dunlap holed and Little putted short. Instead of two putts to win, Little had to hole a putt of over two feet for a half.

Then, Dunlap knocked in another from 15 feet for a three on the last hole to go to lunch 1 up.

Dunlap drew away rapidly in the afternoon. He won the first with a par four, and the fourth and fifth with birdies. The shots he played to these last two holes were magnificent.

STYMIE HURTS LITTLE

On the fourth we saw an instance when the stymie can be the just reward of superior shot-making. Here Dunlap's second was eight feet away and Little's 40. Little putted four feet wide of the hole and left himself open for the stymie, which followed. In trying to negotiate it, he knocked Dunlap's ball in.

The final match may well develop into a battle of putters. Both players have displayed a fine touch around the greens and both have putters which can get very hot. In a match like this, the man who holes the most putts is very likely to win.

By JESS CARVER

The Waynesburg College football Wolfpack was retired in some confusion on the advent of its initial appearance of 1933 and the Duquesne University Night Riders have put the first nick in their trying schedule.

The Wolfpack bowed under an 18-to-6 defeat at Forbes Field last night before 12,000 citizens as the 1933 intercollegiate gridiron campaign officially was opened. While the Pack went loping back to its Greene County lair licking its wounds and decisively beaten, it was still growling and in its sortie here gave hint of more formidable prowls to come.

CURRIE GOES WELL

The aerial game of the Dukes and the crack-up of its own passing attack was responsible for the defeat of the Pack. The Dukes looked like the better eleven throughout, even though scared occasionally by Waynesburg's sensational little halfback, Rab Currie, who had as much trouble with the ineffectiveness of his own interference as he did with the defensive tactics of the Dukes.

To these glistening orbs, Currie looked to be about 10 steps too fast for the remainder of his troupe, a factor that worked to his great disadvantage.

Billy Paul, Waynesburg's center, lived up to all the nice things that have been written and spoken about him, playing a sterling defensive game throughout.

Two long forward passes accounted for the first two Duquesne touchdowns. Waynesburg tallied via the same route.

Midway in the opening period, Al DeLuca, who, by the way, was the big guy of the Duquesne attack, heaved a long pass to Capt. Al Krankota, good for 34 yards and a touchdown.

Fullbacker Sil Zaninelli then missed the first of three placement attempts for extra points he tried during the evening.

Waynesburg wasted little time in knotting the count. Three plays after the kickoff, Halfback Ross then dropped back and arched a perfect pass to Quarterback Donnelley, who pulled the ball down on the Dukes' 43-yard strip and outran the secondary defensemen to score. Steve Sinko came busting through to block Donnelley's try for the extra point.

DELUCA TALLIES

The second period was three-quarters gone when DeLuca flipped another long one, squarely into the arms of Art Strutt on the Waynesburg three-yard mark. On the next play, DeLuca went sliding through right tackle for six points more.

Currie threw Duquesne ranks into consternation as the second half opened. He took the kickoff on his own 12-yard mark and went scooting down the right side of the field, swept past the entire Duquesne team only to be nabbed from behind on the Duquesne 30-yard mark by Hank Weinberg. Linesman Harry Robb ruled he put one of his footsies out of bounds on the 39, however, and the ball was brought back to that spot.

In the fourth quarter Waynesburg worked the ball deep into Duquesne territory, but two poorly thrown flat passes, intercepted by alert Dukes, put the kibosh on the drive.

Currie's interference on a pass in the final period gave the Dukes a 17-yard gain and a first down on the Waynesburg 15. The ball was advanced to the four-yard stripe, Jim Filingham plunging over for the final tally.

PACK MISSES STARS

The Dukes marked up nine first downs to five for Waynesburg, completed four out of seven passes against five out of 18 for the Pack and intercepted no fewer than four of the visitors' heaves.

Duquesne enjoyed a decided edge in the matter of manpower and were able to use all three of their injured stars, DeCoster, McDonald and Filingham, while Waynesburg had to fight through minus the services of Capt. Wettie Mancuso, star guard, and Fred Rollanson, veteran punter and halfback.

GIANTS REGAIN LOST GROUND

Associated Press.

The New York Giants, through one great day of pitching, have changed their final Western tour into a triumphant march toward the National League pennant.

They all but disposed of the Chicago Cubs' aspirations with one big blow yesterday, winning both halves of a doubleheader, 5 to 1 and 4 to 0, and climbed back to the point where they were when they started West, 7½ games in front of the field. Four clubs still might beat the Giants, but the fans already have decided the Terrymen are "in."

Here is how the three leading clubs stood today:

	Won	Lost	Pct.	*T.P.
New York	85	53	.616	14
Pittsburgh	79	62	.560	13
Chicago	80	65	.559	11

*Games to play.

Even if the Pirates and the Cubs win all their remaining games, the Giants have to capture only six to make the final standing look like this:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
New York	91	61	.599
Pittsburgh	92	62	.597
Chicago	91	63	.591

The St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Braves, 10½ games behind, respectively, after the Cards took a 9-2 lacing from the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Braves trimmed Pittsburgh, 10-1, yesterday, are in the race mathematically only.

Hal Schumacher and Herman Bell were the pitchers who put the damper on Chicago's hopes yesterday. Schumacher set down the Cubs with six hits in the first game.

Bud Parmelee started the second game for the Giants, but was too wild to last and Bell did most of the pitching. Between them they allowed only two hits.

The Phillies and the Cincinnati Reds split a double bill, Reg Grabowski, back with the Phils after some minor league seasoning, allowed the Reds only two singles as he won the opener, 4-0. Allyn Stout, of the Reds, came back with a five-hit job for a 3-1 triumph.

The American League program was obliterated by rain.

DISTRICT NET CARD HEAVY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

A large week-end net card looms for the district, despite advance of autumnal weather. The start of the first Stanton Heights invitation men's doubles tourney, postponed yesterday because of soggy courts, is slated for the North Aiken lot at 1 p. m. today, while at Ambridge, final frays of the annual Beaver County championship grace the card.

The windup of the Allegheny Mountains titular affair is set for the Westmont Tennis Club, Johnstown, tomorrow afternoon.

Thirty-two teams are entered in the Stanton competition. The inaugural session calls for Dr. John and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, first seeded pair, to meet R. R. Miller and Al McCabe, Coraopolis combine. Frank Broida and McCook Reed, rated second, engage the strong P. A. A. pair, Art Glaser and Jack Redmond.

Paul Barber, Sewickley ace and 1932 Northwestern Pennsylvania premier, battles Harry Cooper, veteran Youngstown star, in man-to-man finale of the Beaver milling. Cooper and Al Moore take on the hard-hitting Stantonians, Russ Unger and George Henderson, for masculine dual honors.

B. F. Arkle, Wheeling luminary and '32 West Penn champion, encounters Eddie Alcorn, former Pitt racquet leader, here today for right to joust with Dave Devlin, Cambria crack, in the Allegheny Mountains men's singles final tomorrow.

MRS. ROSE COPS FOURTH TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

Mrs. J. Bernd Rose, captain of the Allegheny Country Club women's golf team, annexed her fourth Western Pennsylvania women's golf championship over her home links yesterday, defeating Betty Abernethy, of Oakmont, in the final round, 6 and 5.

The Allegheny star gave one of the most brilliant exhibitions of golf ever played in this district to win. She rarely made a mistake in the selection of clubs, and was deadly from the tee and on the fairways.

She made only two mistakes in the 13 holes played. She pulled her tee shot on the short seventh to the left of the green, the ball being only inches from out of bounds.

Then, following a good drive from the tenth tee, she hooked her iron shot into a tree, but made a brilliant recovery.

With no college games scheduled in the district this afternoon, scholastic football teams of Western Pennsylvania offer the fans an attractive program of games, several of them presenting members of the class AA competition.

Three members of the double A group open their home campaigns, Jeannette, undefeated in 1932 and co-champion, entertaining Sewickley Township at Jeannette. Turtle Creek Union, under a new coach in Ben Haldy, who has replaced Foxy Miller, clashing with Pitcairn, making its bow as a class A school, and Wilkinsburg tangling with on old rival in Avalon at Wilkinsburg.

AMBRIDGE FACES TEST

In the third quarter he ran 48 yards to again cross the line, but the play was called back and Mt. Lebanon penalized for illegal clipping.

In other contests, Braddock invaded New Castle and took a 26-to-0 drubbing from Phil Bridenbaugh's well-drilled eleven. Scott High, of North Braddock, made it two in a row by beating Canonsburg, 20 to 0.

Elizabeth carried too much power for Bentleyville, winning, 25-0; Bellevue nosed out its alumni, 6 to 0; Apollo ran over Kittanning, 26-0; Homestead walloped Brentwood, 40-0; Charleroi defeated Ellsworth-Cokeburg, 13-0, and Monessen nosed out Carmichaels, 7-0, and Freeport won by two touchdowns from Washington Township, 14-0.

D.-E. Grid Team Faces Morris Harvey

ELKINS, W. Va., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—The Davis-Elkins and Morris Harvey grid varsities will open the local football campaign today.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—I forget whether it's a brand of coffee or yeast cakes or cigarets that has "that little something extra," but, whichever it is, the Red Sox should start drinking or eating or smoking that brand right away because they've been taking inventory of the morgue where the Bostons store their lost games. Nauseating data shows the Sox have dropped more than 30 games this season by one run. If they had only put that little extra something in half of those contests, the Sox would be so high in the second division they'd have vertigo.

There always is more satisfaction getting licked, 10 to 0, because then you know you've been licked and it's no use crying over spilled beans—or is it milk? But, after you just get nosed out by one run, you can think of so many situations, when a single would have won the game. It's worse than counting sheep in bed.

But there's one satisfaction the Red Sox can have in this season's record. They are positively leading the league in men left on bases.

Detroit takes on Youngstown at Burgwin Field, Johnstown clashes with Cleveland at Frick Park, Pontiac plays Dearborn at Brentwood, Flint and Fort Wayne play at Olympia Park, and Waterbury tangles with Dayton at Frick Park.

All of the games will get under way at 5 p. m. with the exception of the Waterbury-Dayton game, scheduled for 2 p. m.

Twelve cities are represented in the N. F. B. tourney this year. President C. E. Brewer, of Detroit; Secretary Doik Novario, of Cleveland, and Hubert G. Johnson, of Detroit, supervised the draw last night.

Second round games will be played tomorrow. The tourney will close next Saturday.

STOGIES TRAIL IN SERIES

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Holding a lead of three games to one over the Wheeling Stogies, the Zanesville Grays are back home in a commanding position to clinch the Mid-Atlantic League pennant playoff tonight.

In a battle of home runs, the Grays trounced the Stogies on their home field last night, 4 to 1, giving Wheeling an almost insurmountable barrier to hurdle.

It was Henry Fiarito, Zanesville center fielder, who appeared in the hero role, poling out two homers to account for all the Grays' runs. The score:

Mothers Blamed for Girls' Incompetency in Homes

Are modern maids n. g. housekeepers?

Just walking ornaments, who can't boil water without burning it?

And if they are, whose fault is it? Theirs? Or mamma's?

No. This isn't an attack on modern girls. It's a heavy wail from one of them. And she's plenty indignant, because she thinks mamma hasn't given her a break.

Are you treating your girl as she has been treated?

Dear Elsie—

I've been hearing a lot of wisecracks lately, about "woman's place being in the kitchen," and a lot of smart remarks about us girls going into business, and not learning to run a home, and I'm mad!

I can't cook myself. I don't know how to get up a dinner, or run a house. I've just realized that lately, and just realized, too, what a bad outlook it gives me. I've realized it because I've just got engaged, and expect to be married some time this fall. And it has suddenly struck me that I don't know a thing about keeping a home, when I get one. And I'm thinking seriously about why all this is true.

I've always been pretty popular. I have a lot of girl friends, and more than half of them don't know any more about things like that than I do. And I know why, too.

A lot of people are fond of saying that we modern girls don't know how to run a home because we don't want to know. That we're shiftless. Well, that makes me boil! Because of all the girls I know, including myself, there isn't one whose mother ever taught her anything.

MOTHER OBJECTED

Some mothers may think they are doing their daughters a favor to "let them off" of household chores, but I know that my mother didn't have any such idea. She never taught me anything like that because it was "too much trouble to have me messing around."

I never thought much about it until I fell in love, and began to think of Jim and me in a little nest all our own. Then it all came home to me. I thought, appalled, "Why, I can't even boil water! I can't even cook apple sauce! I couldn't make a stew, without spoiling it!" And I began to look back, to when I was about 10 or 12, and wanted to help mother.

Of course I was clumsy. Kids are. But I could have learned. I tried to. Only to have her say, "Oh, get out! I can do it quicker myself than I can tell you how!" Of course I lost interest after a while. Then, when I really began to grow up, I got all steamed up about running around. I finished Hi and went to business college, and got a job, and by that time I thought it was terrible if mother suggested that I "help with dinner" when I got home. I was tired and interested in other things.

NOT GIRL'S FAULT

And a lot of the girls I know went through the same thing. I've asked them.

I'm going to cooking school now and learning a lot. But I think it's terrible for mothers to not teach their girls—or boys, either—anything about cooking. My mother is awfully sweet, and she's been awfully good to me, but I certainly would be much better off if she'd let me help her and learn things when I wanted to.

And I think some of these folks who are so fond of knocking modern girls because of their lack of knowledge about running a home better do a little investigating before they blame them. It isn't their fault they don't know. A lot of their mothers have held out on them. They're not flighty. They don't hate housework. They just weren't allowed to learn it.

MARIE.

Is that a picture of what you're doing to your youngster, Stranger? Do you say "Oh, run away and don't bother me!" when your 6-year-old wants to help wash the dishes or beat the cake?

What sort of future are you preparing for her, if you do?

TOO MANY PRETTY GALS?

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

A young man sauntered home from a Beauty Pageant. Round and round they had circled in the crossed brilliance of red, white and blue lights that beat down in super-illumination, hundreds of girls, petite, tall, statuesque, dazzling, demure, silver-blondes, golden ones, mahogany reds, nut-browns, midnight-black locks, bright-eyes, sleepy ones, star-eyes and sloe, eyebrows plucked high and low, mouths generous and childsize, all in bathing suits and slippers, the square inches of lovely skin of varied colors and varied degrees of brown, from egg-shell to maple-syrup tan. The hours went by, the lights flared and the girls circled, losing their numbers ten by ten as the judges balloted, lovely after lovely, pretty after pretty, and really beautiful after beautiful.

Said the young man to his pal: "Now you see why I remain a so-called gay blade of a bachelor. The world is too full of girls, too many of them attractive, too many of them desirable, for a fellow to make up his mind. I marvel at those who can! Am I right or am I obsessed? But it seems to me that once there were a few plain girls around. Now there either aren't any, or else when a girl is born plain she refuses to accept the handicap and immediately goes about the business of painting the lily by taking good care of hair and teeth, exercising her body, eating right, discreetly helping the color scheme along here and there, and trying for charm, until there are quite some folks that begin to think of her as a right pretty gal! It's curing ME of marrying. If and when I could. So I reckon I'll just sit on the middle of my back in my comfortable chair, and THINK about 'em."

Is that what is the matter with the young man whom magazine-writers and thinkers-out-loud-in-the-papers are worrying about because he is not marrying enough? Perhaps it isn't the depression after all!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Fold Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am enclosing herewith a wedding announcement which I would like to have folded correctly and returned to me.

There have been several discussions as to the correct way of folding the announcement, and even the different printers have different ideas.

Will you be so kind as to settle our discussion? B.

The wedding announcement that you sent me (six inches long by four and five-eighths wide) is not to be folded at all. It is designed to be sent in an envelope of a size into which it conveniently fits without folding. This size of wedding invitation and announcement was brought out several years ago by a famous paper manufacturer, and the idea was and is that it shall not be folded. Folding this announcement means that it loses its style, its charm. Your engraver should have in his stock the envelopes that are part of this "set."

At a Hotel

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—What is the correct way for a single girl to register at a hotel? Miss Mary J. Smith, Mary J. Smith, or Mary Smith?

2.—Shall I pay my hotel bill in advance, or pay it when I check out? I expect to stay about a week.

3.—Should I make up my bed every morning, or will the maid take care of that?

UNCERTAIN YOUNG MISS.

1—An unmarried woman should always use the Miss before her name when she registers in a hotel: Miss Mary Smith, Detroit, Michigan.

An excellent thing for a woman to remember is that she registers at a hotel the name that appears on her visiting-card, that is, her formal name.

2—Pay your bill as you are leaving.

3—The maid will take care of your room.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

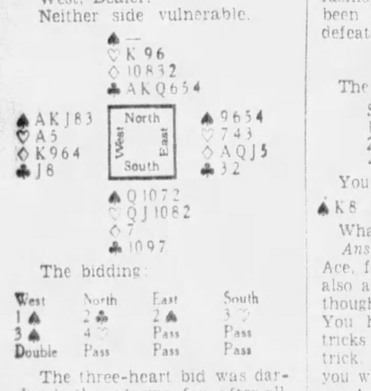
Making a Foolish Contract

Sometimes players reach perfectly foolish contracts and find that they have had a play to make the hand. These are times when skill is of great importance, and the utmost concentration is necessary in order to find the right play.

An example of this occurred the other day in a New York Bridge club when Mr. Geoffrey Mott-Smith found himself in the rather weird contract of four hearts on the following hand, and also found that the hand was perfectly makable.

West, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♡
3 ♠	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

The three-heart bid was daring in the extreme, for, after all, Mr. Mott-Smith held no card higher than a Queen. However, not being vulnerable, he felt he stood a good chance of defeating a contract of four spades if the other side could be driven to it. His partner's raise was somewhat disconcerting, but he decided to make the best of a bad situation.

The Opening lead was the King of spades, which Mr. Mott-Smith immediately ruffed in Dummy. Now he stopped and considered the hand very carefully. It seemed as though he should draw trumps in order to be able to run the clubs eventually. The trouble with this line of play is that the opponents will start running a few spade tricks. Mr. Mott-Smith finally realized that if a spade lead were to come from the West hand no harm would be done, but that if it came from the East hand it would be rather disastrous. He therefore immediately led a diamond from the board, establishing an entry in his own hand and shutting out East's entry completely.

As the play went East went up with the Ace and led a trump. West took the trick with the Ace of hearts and led another trump. Mr. Mott-Smith had previously unblocked with the King of hearts and so was able to make the rest of the tricks.

It is apparent what would have happened if this line of play had not been followed. West would have refused to win the first round of trumps, and would have taken the second. He would then have led a diamond to his partner's Ace, and his partner would have returned a spade through Declarer's Queen-Ten. In this fashion four tricks would have been taken and the contract defeated one trick.

Today's Question

The bidding:

South	North
1 N T	2 ♣
2 N T	3 ♠
4 ♠	Pass

You, East, hold:

♠ K 8 ♡ A 9 5 2 ◇ 10 8 7 3 ♣ A 9 4

What do you lead?

Answer: A low club. (The Ace, followed by a low club, is also an acceptable solution, although it is not quite as good.) You have two almost certain tricks and a probable third trick. It is most unlikely that you will find your partner with an Ace or a King, or even a trump honor which will readily provide the setting trick. From the bidding, however, Declarer is marked with at least a five-card club suit; Dummy probably has three of the suit and conceivably four, although it is barely possible that it may hold only two. At any rate, there is a far better than even chance that your partner, if not able to ruff the second round of the suit, will certainly be able to ruff the third round.

By leading a low club you are now in a position, when you get in with either the trump King or the heart Ace, to play the Ace of clubs and allow partner to ruff the third round. Although the low club lead sacrifices any chance of giving partner two ruffs in the suit, it keeps control in case you find out that you will be unable to give your partner any ruffs at all, and allows you, if necessary, to change your line of defense.

It is hardly worth while to play for an outside chance of setting a contract 2 tricks by leading the Ace when you can play equally carefully for setting it one and still keep some additional possibility of insuring this set.

Hugh Astounds Madge With His Theory

Hugh gave me a quick, startled look as I told him that "the way of the transgressor had been unexpectedly made easy," and I hastened to explain.

"Mother Graham wishes me to go to Bridgehampton on an errand for her without first returning to the farm," I told him. "I suggested, as you heard, that I would go on to Hampton Bays to look at a hat, and she commented that I probably would be gone all the afternoon. So, as soon as Mrs. Ticer returns, we will start for Patchogue to meet Avis Arlen. I will have plenty of time to do both errands, either going or coming."

But Hugh looked troubled.

"I do not wish to cavil at the goods the gods provide," he said, "but—what about your husband? Didn't you say that you were going to ask Mrs. Underwood—" His voice trailed off uncertainly.

"To tell Dicky that I was going to Patchogue with you?" I finished with a cheery nonchalance I was far from feeling. "Yes, I did tell you that; but I had not counted upon my mother-in-law's whims. If I stop at the farmhouse in direct disregard of her instructions, there will be what Mrs. Ticer calls 'ructions.' Dicky, in all probability, will not miss me, and I can explain everything to him after I get back."

"Will not miss you!" Hugh's voice was as horrified as if I had told him Dicky had just murdered his mother. But I ignored the serious note and answered with casual lightness.

SUGGESTS OWN CAR

"He and Harry wouldn't heed Gabriel's trumpet today, they're so engrossed in their electrical effects. They're just like small boys with a new electric railway, but I imagine they are going to work out something beautiful for the wedding decorations."

"I'm sure they are," Hugh said, and distinct relief showed through the commonplace words. "I'll just see that my car is brought around, so that we shall be ready to start when Mrs. Ticer comes."

"I think it would be better to take my car," I said. "I am sure neither of us cares particularly for comment, and I think we shall minimize it if I take Mrs. Ticer home, saying that I have an errand at Bridgehampton for my mother-in-law, and you casually offer to go along in case of tire trouble, or something like that."

My fury at myself was augmented as I felt my cheeks burning under Hugh's look, which, to my surprise, held amusement instead of the subconscious censure which I feared would be his at any touch of duplicity in me.

HUGH HAS HUNCH

"You look exactly like a little girl caught stealing jam," he said with a chuckle. "After all, you are not doing anything for which you need to blush ever so faintly. But as we have to wait for Mrs. Ticer, suppose you tell me what distressed and astonished you so much just now, when you finished talking with Mr. Veritzen. Of course," he amended hastily, "don't unless you wish."

With his unfailing tact he was sparing my confusion by changing the subject. I caught at his cue gratefully.

"I suppose," I said slowly, my imagination is working overtime, as Dicky put it; but I could not help feeling that Mr. Veritzen meant something special when he said I would be glad to know he was on the trail of the missing letter."

"No doubt you are right," Hugh said, "but I do not see why you should be concerned. Of course it is Avis Arlen that he suspects, and she richly deserves suspicion. There is nothing that you can possibly do about it, so why wear yourself out worrying?"

"I know you are right," I said dully, "but I simply can't help feeling afraid for the girl. If her mother has lost her money, this job of hers is probably a necessity, and if she should lose it—"

"She in all probability couldn't get another in any office in the country," Hugh said grimly. "I never have seen a girl who struck me as being so absolutely inefficient as does Avis Arlen. But I do not think you have to worry. Do you believe in hunches?" he asked abruptly.

"Yes, I do," I said emphatically. "What is yours?"

"That Miss Arlen is not nearly so poverty-stricken as she pretends to be," he said quietly.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Do Not Delay Treatment of Any Foot Deformity

Great sympathy is aroused at the sight of a child with a club foot. It is discouraging to a physician to see this defect. He knows that if proper measures had been taken in early infancy the deformity could have been corrected. Unfortunately, in many cases medical advice is sought when it is too late for correction or cure.

Dr. Copeland

"Talipes" is the medical name for club foot. The foot droops and resembles a club. This affliction is usually traced to a birth injury or to an injury in early childhood. It may be the result of some disease like infantile paralysis.

Occasionally the affliction involves both feet. Such cases are usually the result of some marked weakness of the muscles and nerves of the foot. If early medical treatment is obtained, the deformity can be corrected and often completely cured.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of early attention to a deformity of this nature. All cases of congenital club foot should be treated in infancy or as early as possible. It is only when the affliction is corrected before the bones become firm that complete cure is possible.

In the treatment, the foot is placed in a normal position by means of special manipulation. It is kept in this position by the application of a plaster-of-paris bandage. The cast is kept on for several weeks, then removed and placed with a supporting bandage.

When the condition is not treated until late childhood has arrived, or when the deformity is the result of an infection like infantile paralysis, it can only be cured by operation. The operation should not be dreaded. Let me assure the worried mother that it is a simple procedure and when performed by a competent surgeon, has little danger attached to it.

In this operation there is a cutting of the tendon of the foot. This is called a "tenotomy" and after it is performed the afflicted foot is placed in a plaster-of-paris bandage which is kept on until healing takes place. The plaster cast is then removed. The foot is massaged and exercised until the deformity is entirely corrected.

This operation has been successful in many cases of club foot caused by the recent epidemic of infantile paralysis. We are indeed grateful to the improved methods and skill of modern surgery. In former years little hope could be offered to victims of this affliction. Today there is great hope for them.

I am often asked whether the "club foot shoe" is of benefit to a victim of club foot. The club foot shoe was used for many years as a remedy for this deformity. Doctors no longer approve of this shoe and it is rarely used. The shoe is painful and disfiguring and seldom leads to a cure.

Household Hints

Shantung and tussore silk should always be ironed when quite dry.

If parsley is washed in hot water instead of cold, it will keep its flavor much better and be easier to chop.

Before putting bacon in the larder, put a piece of grease-proof paper between each two rashers. This will keep them fresh for at least a week.

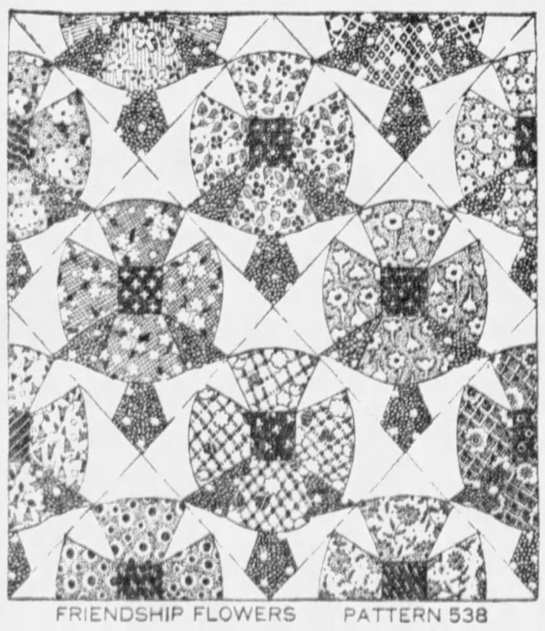
QUILT MADE OF FLOWERS



FRIENDSHIP FLOWERS PATTERN 538

By LAURA WHEELER

Flowers in a riot of color are always a delight to the eye. Having them about her in her garden, it is but natural that the quilt-maker should wish to reproduce the gay effect in a quilt. In the Friendship Flowers pattern the quiltmaker may paint her flowers in whatever colors she desires, for each one is made of different scraps of material. This is popular as a friendship quilt not alone because each block can be made by a different friend or of materials donated by her, but because the block is so simple to make that it is unusually good pick-up work.

Pattern 538 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Are you doing your scalp massage every night, like a nice girl? Better not forget that. It will impart health and vitality to your glorious halo. Why? Because hair lives on the blood streams by rousing them to action. Stockings get more and better groceries. Fluff up the wave, spread out fingers and thumbs, start mauling and clawing.

When walking, point toes straight ahead, hold chest high, carry head neatly, keep that inward curve at the rear waistline, let arms swing easily, and do not wriggle the hips. You may not believe it, but hip swinging is tough on one's ankles, makes them large. Incidentally, it is a good time to remember that by holding in your tummy muscles there will not be a chance for the middle-aged bay window to develop.

STOCK MARKET MAKES QUIET ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. — The stock market moved quietly but steadily forward in the early part of today's abbreviated session. Metals and alcohols were firm while tobaccos resumed the rally which was interrupted by yesterday's late reaction. Utilities improved.

Homestake rose 9 points while United States Smelting advanced 4. Issues up 1 to around 2 points included United States Steel, Case, American Can, Allied Chemical, National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Delaware and Hudson, American Tobacco B and Cerro de Pasco. General Motors, Liggett and Myers B, Sears Roebuck and New York Central showed lesser gains.

Weekend business reports stressed the continued activity in retail trade and in the automotive industry, while indicating that steel production and some other heavy lines of industry were still on the decline.

Considerable uncertainty prevailed in Wall street over the administration's monetary policy, but despite the renewed demands for inflation, and the drop in dollar exchange, Wall street was definitely inclined to the opinion that no drastically inflationary steps were in the immediate offing.

The dollar continued to slip in the early foreign exchange dealings, however, with French francs quoted at a new high at 5.82 cents, and sterling up 2¾ cents to $4.69½.

WHEAT PRICES SCORE GAINS

CHICAGO, Sept. 16. — Wheat prices scored gains today after an irregular start. Reports that domestic supplies of wheat had been over estimated, attracted notice, and there was also buying on account of upturns in British exchange. Opening at ⅛ off to ¼ up, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started ¼-⅜ down, and subsequently rallied.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Copper Industry Nears Agreement

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Further progress was made this week toward smoothing out difficulties to assure 100 per cent acceptance of the copper code, it was learned in Wall street today.

As a result of a meeting of copper producers here it was reported 85 per cent of the industry has agreed to the terms of the code which would improve employment conditions, and harmonize production and consumption. Only one custom smelter and two small producers have not given their full approval, it was reported.

Paris to Reinstate Foreign Securities

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—Quotations of foreign stocks, prohibited since 1930, will be again permitted on the Paris Bourse under a decree approved at a cabinet session today.

Bourse circles expect several American stocks, including British American tobacco, to be introduced.

DROP IN STEEL OPERATIONS SLACKENS

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel continues to decrease, but at a much milder pace than recently. No decrease in actual ultimate consumption is seen, and the inference is that the decrease in production and shipments is due to completion of old engagements made by buyers in anticipation of higher prices.

This week's ingot producing rate may be estimated at 36 per cent of capacity, against 38 per cent last week and 40 per cent the week before. In the four weeks through September there was a decline of about 17 points, so that the rate of decrease has already been cut in half.

No signs are seen indicating any material change in ultimate consumption in the next few weeks, and the rate of mill operation will presumably depend on liquidation of stocks of steel, semi-manufactures and manufactures accumulated during the recent bulge.

The extent of such stocks is purely conjectural as in general they cannot be observed so as to permit the making of estimates. That there are stocks of something this side of final consumption is obvious from the recent heavy production. For the week ended May 27 ingot production reached a rate of 36 per cent, on the upgrade, while now it has reached 36 per cent on the downgrade.

RAIL BUYING LIGHT

With the virtual absence of railroad consumption and very light absorption of steel in the oil and gas fields and in building, actual consumption of steel cannot have been much above the equivalent of a 36 per cent rate. Consumption by the automobile industry has not been engaging more than about 8 per cent of the steel making capacity, although the industry has been running relatively well since June 1.

If production of ingots had been at a 36 per cent rate in June, July and August the three months would have totaled 6,100,000 tons, where as the total officially reported was 8,700,000 tons, showing an excess of 2,600,000 tons. Nothing like the entire tonnage can be explained away except on the basis of stocks, now to pass into actual ultimate consumption. The whole amount would represent 10 points in the steel producing rate for more than four months.

In other words, while production recently ran in excess of ultimate consumption it will for a time run under consumption. It does not follow that mill operations will continue to decline, at least in any important way, as usual seasonal increase in demand is expected soon and very largely that would mean fresh steel rather than stocks of steel or manufacturers of steel. If seasonal increase is to come it should be seen clearly not later than in the first fortnight of October. In some lines, such as standard pipe, seasonal increase is reasonably certain.

CODE PROBLEMS ARISE

The intricacies of procedure under the code are not all ironed out yet as new problems have been arising from day to day, but the market is getting into smooth running order. Mills have been able to accept substantially all the new business offered but have not been actively soliciting business, while some possible buyers may have postponed action to make sure that they really must pay full prices including all extras.

Apart from seasonal improvement, the best prospect for increased steel demand lies with the railroads. This will not run largely to rails, much mentioned in Washington dispatches, partly because rails have always been a choice subject. Federal aid to railroads is expected soon and will result in repairs to rolling stock and in track work, involving substantial demand for plates, spikes, tie plates and joints. Such expenditures are more needed than rail replacements, and cause much labor employment.

The federal building program seems almost as far off as ever regarding actual demand upon the mills for delivery of steel, there being scarcely a chance that mills will feel the influence in any large way before next year.

Heavy melting steel scrap is quotable at $12.50 to $13, representing a decline of 50 cents in the week and of a dollar in 30 days, from the high point reached in the movement.

NEW ERA SEEN FOR FINANCIAL ADVERTISING

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Financial advertisers have been much concerned over the effects of the new securities act and banking regulation. They seem to feel at sea. Some fear that bankers and corporation directors are not able or willing to carry out the guarantees now required.

These ideas were combatted in the course of the recent session of the Financial Advertisers' Association, and it seems to me that the financial selling fraternity have been unduly pessimistic.

The regulation of the public distribution of securities in this country is one part of the new deal which is good, and is going to last. And I believe that it is going to result in more financial advertising, not less.

MUST SHOW PUBLIC

Of course the advertising will have to be on a higher plane. But when did good advertising ever mean less advertising?

If investment banking is as sound as claimed, and as I believe it is getting to be, all the investment bankers have got to do is to convince the public of the fact.

Some of them argue that the loss of bank affiliates has reduced the market for securities, and that the big banks now are out of touch with little independent investment concerns, so that they cannot render such service.

But most of this about risks and impaired distribution channels overlooks the plain fact that the ultimate market for securities is with the investing public. That public is the thing to be convinced and sold. And in the past there has been too much indirection and secrecy to allow the best job to be done.

NEW METHODS NEEDED

The new deal in financial advertising requires only new and improved advertising methods — methods which will reach the public and convince them.

Prove to the investing public that investment banking is sound, and that securities are good, and there will be no difficulty. The difficulty lies in the trouble of getting rid of the devious methods of the past.

The notion that advertising—and particularly financial advertising—is a means of inducing people to buy things which they don't want by exaggerated claims and glossing over defects, is all wrong.

MORE DIRECT APPEAL

One result of present laws is that promoters and financial salesmen will have to go more directly to the investing public. If bankers cannot take the risks, the issuing concerns will have to go to bank depositors with their story.

That means newspaper advertising.

And it means good advertising. The financial "ad" of the future must be truthful, clear, informative and frank.

Then the people will read financial advertisements, because it will be worth while; and they will "accept" them, because there will be the basis of confidence.

There will be less chance for rumor, suspicion and misunderstanding.

WILL AVOID DANGERS

Instead of paying bribes to get "publicity," and secret commissions or bonuses to financial middlemen, the issuers of securities are going to deal more directly and openly.

They will pay for the publication of honest and productive announcements of fact. But they will avoid the dangers of misrepresentation by middlemen.

All this calls merely for a change in the scope and the emphasis of financial advertising. It must not be half-truths and "hurry-hurry." Financial advertising must choose such media as will reach the ultimate investors, and educate them as to the real merits of securities and financial institutions — give facts as to the performance record and the outlook for earnings.

The time is near for more and better financial advertising.

The Lone Star Gas Company and the Community Natural Gas Company have appealed to the Oklahoma State Supreme Court from a corporation commission order for a reduction in gas rates in six Oklahoma towns.

WHEAT SURPLUS LOW—SNOW

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP.)—World wide belief that a big surplus of wheat exists in the United States received a violent jolt today.

Authoritative statements from former assistant secretary of agriculture Bernard W. Snow, one of the foremost grain experts in the country, imply that the supposed surplus is practically a myth. In a carefully prepared summary of present wheat supplies and requirements, Snow says:

"I am convinced that without any export trade this year other than the suggested shipment of 40,000,000 bushels as a relief to the situation on the North Pacific coast, our own domestic requirements will so closely absorb our new crop and old carryover that the next carryover, June 30, at the close of the season will not be a figure in excess of what our national food safety requires."

admiringly. "You couldn't guess who called you up?"

"And I couldn't trace the call because I didn't want to frighten Miss Leonard. Besides, it probably came from some public pay station."

"Sure it did. That's how I do it," said the gangster. "You've been followed today, and not only by my boys. And here's a hot one; my boy don't know who the other trailer is. Out-of-town lad. You know what that means."

"Killers are imported, aren't they?" commented Durant.

"You said it. Scare you?"

"Quite a bit," confessed Durant. "It's unpleasant knowing a killer is nearby."

Gazotti grinned. "That particular one ain't nearby. Maybe another has taken his place, but that lad won't ever trail anyone any more."

Durant stared at him. "What the devil are you saying?" he demanded.

Gazotti's eyes widened. "Who? Me? Did I speak? And if I did speak, do you think I'd say anything that might be used against me by my own lawyer that would like nothing better than to put me in the place he snatched me from? But don't be alarmed; he wasn't rubbed out. He was just talked to, and he's left—he's left town. As I say, maybe somebody else has taken his place, but the boys will look out for him. And they're looking out for Miss Leonard. And maybe, from what you say, Siddall has been framed. And if that's so, you'd better go to work and find out what Waxted doesn't know she knows."

His little eyes gleamed wickedly.

"Some jobs must be fun. Finding out what Waxted doesn't know she knows would be a lot of sport to me if that darned Lottie weren't so jealous."

Efficient Bodyguard

Durant blushed. But he was perfectly suave as he greeted Lottie and Gertie Waxted on their return to the table.

Gazotti looked meaningly at his over-ripe beauty. She accepted her cue.

"I could bat my brains out against a pillow," she said. Her yawn was the perfection of art.

"Baby, I was hoping you'd say something like that," said Gazotti. "I'm so tired I can't see." He lifted a finger and a head waiter was instantly beside him. "If Mr. Durant is given a check I wouldn't like it," he said.

"Certainly, Mr. Gazotti," the waiter assured him. "It will be a pleasure to see that Mr. Durant enjoys himself."

"You two kids stick around and enjoy yourself," said Gazotti. "There's a good show here by and by."

Durant looked at Gertie Waxted.

"I'd like that," she said.

"I couldn't imagine anything more delightful," Durant told her.

Four men left different tables in the restaurant and converged, with a casualness that deceived none of the sophisticates present, at the exit just as Tony and Lottie arrived there. Durant smiled grimly. Tony's bodyguard was certainly efficient; he was willing to believe that the men told to guard Sue were equally efficient.

What a world this was! Private armies were maintained and private wars were waged, and the forces of law and order were powerless.

"I haven't got a penny, but I'll give you a dime," laughed Gertie Waxted.

"I wasn't very far away," he returned. "I was just thinking of Tony's bodyguard."

"On the job, eh? Well, he wouldn't have them if he didn't need them. I hope no one ever hurts him. He's a nice little man, is Tony."

"You've known him quite a while, haven't you?"

"Oh, you meet everyone sooner or later," she replied. "But he's never been a particular friend of mine, if you know what I mean. Not that I don't think Tony is swell, but—well, you get me."

"I get you," he told her. "And I suppose that a particular friend will dash in here any minute and take you away from me, so I'd better improve my opportunity and dance with you while I have the chance."

She looked at him through lazy eyes. "There isn't anyone particular just now. We have the night ahead of us for dancing. I'd like to talk."

"What about?" he inquired.

"Oh, just talk. You interest me, Mr. Durant."

"You interest me, Miss Waxted," he smiled.

"Make it Gertie and I'll make it Jack," she suggested.

"All right, Gertie."

Liked Slain Girl

She sipped gingerly at her champagne; she shuddered slightly.

"Cold?" he asked solicitously.

"On a night like this? Hardly. I was thinking of Mimi."

"You mean Miss Montagne? You were a friend of her's, weren't you?"

"You wouldn't kid me, would you? Don't tell me you don't read the papers. Of course I was a friend of hers. And it would be just my luck to be there when someone went crazy and knocked her off. Even do a dozen hours with the cops, telling the same story over and over and over, knowing you told the truth, but afraid to change an if, and or but, for fear seven detectives will jump on you and call you a liar?"

He shook his head. "You must have had a tough day."

"I'll say so. And I suppose if I were a nice refined little girl my nerves would be so shot to pieces that I'd be in bed, filled with bromides, and putting on a swell hysteria act. Instead of which, I'm sipping champagne in a night club. Well, that's life in the great city."

"Would you like me to take you home?" he asked.

"Do you mean to my home or your home?"

He shrugged.

"Because," she went on, "I do have a few nerves. I went to my flat late this afternoon to sort of freshen up. I tried to take a nap, and it was no good. I hate the thought of spending the night there. Mimi's photograph is in my living room; a pastel that Raynor—you know, the illustrator; he was sweet on her four or five years ago and couldn't draw enough pictures of her—made years ago that she gave to me. It's in my bedroom. Every time I opened my eyes this afternoon I saw that picture and I wanted to scream. I loved that big noisy mutt."

Durant reached across the table and patted her hand. "Tough luck," he said. "Siddall must have been crazy."

"Call it that," she said. "What difference does it make why. Any girl that's too close to a gangster is likely to get it the same way."

"If you know that, why do you run around with them?" demanded Durant.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We want members who can play musical instruments, fellows!

If you can play, send in your name at once. We are organizing a real honest-to-goodness Junior Patrol orchestra, and we want the best musicians in the Patrol to play with it over the air during Junior Patrol radio programs. Hurry, fellows practice starts soon!

We said yesterday that we had lots of letters in the Mail Box and then had room to print only about one. So now we'll try to cram a lot into today's Mail Box. Don't forget to look for the Sunday Mail Box now, fellows.

Betty Fitzgerald, of 600 McKee avenue, Monessen, is a new captain heard from today. She writes:

"I was thinking about having a Junior Patrol Club and decided to have one. Here are our 10 pledges and I have been elected captain. I had a very nice time on my vacation. We played hide and seek and went roller skating."

Welcome, Betty—let's hear from you soon again.

Ivor H. Allen, of 314 Newkirk street, Carnegie, writes an interesting letter to tell us all about his pets. Look:

"I love animals. I have a polly 28 years old and she says everything. I had a good little dog pal. His name was Tut. He was 8 years old, but he died in the spring. Mother and I both miss him greatly. He was black and tan. I would like to have another like him. I was always kind to him and he was a faithful little pal to me. I also have a black cat. She is cross eyed and real funny."

Lois Doelfel, of 129 Greenfield avenue, writes about being captain. Of course you can be, Lois, if you are elected captain by 10 members of your club.

We have a cartoon of Mickey Mouse and Col. Rolfe drawn by Cathryn Antill, of 705 Ewing street, Washington, Pa. Her cartoon is the first one we have received from a girl, and it is swell.

Bertha Janosick, of 2722 Shelly street, is starting a new patrol—and she sends in 23 pledges. Looks like the membership campaign is a success. Fine, Bertha, and let us know who your captain is as soon as one is elected at your first meeting.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

WILLIAM OF ORANGE LANDING AT TORBAY, ENGLAND (1688)

James II, brother and successor of Charles II and last Stuart king (1685-1688), became unpopular through his autocratic actions and religious policies. Powerful members of the English nobility invited his son-in-law, William of Orange, to force out James and to become English king. William accomplished this with great success, becoming later King William III; England prospered under his rule (1688-1702). (World History.)

STRUCTURE OF A TYPICAL CELL (From Wilson, modified)

Protoplasm is matter in colloidal state (particles of several molecules suspended in another substance) empowered with life-functions. The protoplasm consists of the general groundwork (cytoplasm), and the spherical body (nucleus) near its center. Parts of the cytoplasm are the hyaloplasm, centrosomes, plastids, mitochondria, golgi bodies, cortical layer (ectoplasm) each serving special purposes, and the metaplasm (incidental lifeless matter).

The nucleus consists of linin and chromatin meshworks with dense spots (karyosomes) and sometimes one round nucleolus. The nucleus regulates especially growth and reproduction. (Woodruff: Found. of Biology.)

HARRISON ATTACKED BY TECUMSEH

Tecumseh (1768-1813), an Indian chief, threatened to destroy the Whites who advanced toward the West but was defeated at Tippecanoe (1811) by William Henry Harrison, then governor of the Indian Territory and later President of the United States.

The settling of the regions bordering the Mississippi River proceeded rapidly, and between 1800 and 1820 nine Mississippi states were admitted into the Union, changing the political weight from East to West. The election of Andrew Jackson from Tennessee as seventh President illustrates this. (United States History.)

KING ALFRED VISITING A MONASTERY SCHOOL

Alfred, ruler of the West Saxons (871-901), the great statesman and civilizer, warred not only against invasion, but also against ignorance. He translated "The Pastoral Rule" of Pope Gregory, the "Consolatione Philosophiae" of Boethius and Orosius' History and Geography into the native tongue, changing these to suit the prevailing conditions. He also revised the existing law code. (Literature.)

DIAMONDS (Chemistry)

Diamond is crystallized carbon (octahedron or multiples), the hardest mineral, found mostly in Africa, Australia, Brazil and recently in Arkansas. Industrial diamonds are 1, real but faulty crystals, called "Bortz;" 2, amorphe carbon (black diamond), homogeneous, less brittle.

Kings Do All Right

If you ever wonder what an ex-monarch thinks about you are wrong. They don't.

We've been keeping tabs on a couple of the isolated kings who are not shadow boxing in neutral corners.

They're apparently as contented as a dusty camel at a double oasis.

Some of them looped from their home grounds with plenty of plunder. The others were born in the purple and are living in the red.

With the republics inching up all over the geography, there ain't many places an ex-ruler can go. Sweden, Denmark, Holland and England are still operating under the old management.

The rest of the world is busy being Republican, Democratic or an unhappy combination of both. That means an election every year with the voting practically continuous. No king would ever stand for that. His job was for life unless he abdicated. And as Alfonso said, "If it's for life, I'd better abdicate."

Alfonso must have had an inkling of what was penciled on the wall. And that's what we want to talk about. They say he got away with about twenty million clankers, and we don't mean after dinner mints. He got to the mint before breakfast.

Wilhelm, monarch of all he surveys through a busted telescope, is credited with thirty or forty million dollars. He sent his wagons ahead and followed under separate cover.

We don't know whether the figures are correct. All we know is that he ain't looking for work.

An ex-president doesn't do so well. It was rumored that Machado spiraled out of Cuba with two millions. That was because the airplane people limit you to fifty pounds of baggage. However, two million would look very appetizing on a rubber pitchfork. We will take the job, the oath of office and a pair of water wings.

Once having tasted power, it is hard to put the money back again. Although we have no claim to royalty, we could certainly learn to grab the golden cabbage and wire ahead for reservations.

Some of the ex-kings go back like Carol of Rumania. There was another king of Albania or some place who went back. He had come away empty handed the first time. We know he will not make the same mistake again. It's nice work if you can get it.

The Man for Mayor

Qualifications That the Candidates Should Possess—Brief Comments On Local News.

The primary election, on the outcome of which Pittsburgh's well-being during the next four years may depend, will be held next Tuesday. Many citizens have become disgusted because the events of the campaign have not shaped themselves to their liking. But that will not excuse them from going to the polls and voting conscientiously for what they believe to be best for the city.

The people of Pittsburgh can be reasonably sure of getting a good Mayor if they will require these qualifications. The personal honesty of the candidate should be beyond dispute. His understanding of municipal affairs and his ability to deal with municipal problems should have been proved. And he should not be under obligations to a political machine or a political boss.

The same qualifications should be required of the candidates for City Council. And no less care should be given to the selection of the Councilmanic candidates for whom one is to cast one's ballot than is given to the selection of the Mayoralty candidate. The Mayor's capacity for good or evil will be governed largely by the character of the Council.

Honesty, ability and independence are also, of course, indispensable if we are to have good judges. One of the seven judiciary places to be filled is on the bench of the new Juvenile Court, for which special training is desirable. The judgment of the social service agencies is of value in this connection. And a Juvenile Court judge should be chosen who will select his staff for their ability and training and not for political service.

Candidates who will fill the bill are available for all the offices. Without indorsing anyone the Sun-Telegraph ha[illegible] during the last few weeks to indicate who some of them are. If the voters will free their minds of blind prejudice for or against a candidate and will vote according to the dictates of reason, there need be no fear of the result.

The administration at Washington is proceeding slowly in allocating the $3,300,000,000 NRA fund for public works, and Pittsburgh has received slight encouragement as yet for its strictly municipal projects for which NRA aid is sought. Nevertheless every Pittsburgher should feel happy over the cordial reception that the flood control project is meeting.

*While the proposed storage reservoirs at the head-*waters of the Allegheny and Monongahela will benefit a hundred other communities, in other states as well as Pennsylvania, it is a Pittsburgh project in the sense that Pittsburghers originated it and have promoted it. The news that Secretary of the Interior Ickes is considering it sympathetically is consequently of peculiar local interest.

In celebration of the 146th anniversary of the Constitution, children in Pittsburgh's public and parochial schools yesterday began a week's study of the document. The Constitution has served the country well, and notwithstanding the radical changes that have occurred since its adoption it is still well fitted in the main to the government of the republic.

The constitution of Pennsylvania, on the other hand, while of comparatively recent origin, having taken effect in 1874, is beginning to look rather ramshackle. The people are to vote on 12 amendments in November. And there are other amendments on which many would like to vote—the old age pension plan, for example. There is much to be said in favor of the proposed constitutional convention.

Another interesting anniversary of the week was the 175th of the defeat of Maj. James Grant and his Montgomery Highlanders by the French and Indians on September 14, 1758, at the place where the Courthouse now stands. We all know of the battle and its outcome, because there is a tablet on the Courthouse that tells about it, and recently a novel was published that deals with Grant's defeat.

Also interesting, though not, perhaps, so well known, is the fact that Grant lived for 48 years after his defeat, became a major-general in the British army and fought against us in the Revolution, and in the later years of his life was such a notorious gourmand that he would scarcely permit his cook to be out of his sight by day or night.

Classes in Pittsburgh's free public night schools will open Monday evening. More than 27,000 persons attended the night schools last year—an impressive testimonial to the prevalence of ambition. Perhaps, with unemployment less in evidence, the attendance will not be so large this year. Even though they work during the day persons whose education has been neglected should avail themselves of this opportunity.

*The State Highway Patrol was 10 years old yester-*day. Gov. Pinchot did not exaggerate in complimenting the body on its "great record." But the organization could be of still greater service, according to the Pittsburgh Motor Club, if its members were relieved from duty as collection agents for the Department of Revenue and allowed to devote themselves exclusively to the enforcement of motor and safety regulations. The club's complaint has merit.

The Highway Patrol is engaged in a useful work right now in checking the speed of buses and trucks. A number of bus schedules have been found to call for average speeds of more than 30 miles an hour, which means there must be spurts in excess of the legal maximum. Highway safety demands that the law against speeding be enforced.

*Two features make tomorrow's issue of the Amer-*ican Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, distinctive. An excellent new serial begins—"Kid Sisters Don't Count," by Maysie Greig. And plans are announced for a competition through which you may win $1,000 a year for life. Contestants are asked to submit a good idea in a few words.

Puck, the Comic Weeky section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will, as usual, be replete with mirth-provoking pictures. George Bungle, for instance, gets into a most ludicrous predicament through following the directions of Dr. Adolph Zoom, of Zurich, discoverer of the germ "Neurotica assassinatus," as given in a radio address. How he got out of it is pictured in "The Bungle Family."

The Human Side of the News

The Valorous Deeds of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—They Patrol a Vast Domain in the Arctic

By EDWIN C. HILL

AGE cannot wither nor custom stale the glory and the glamor of the Mounties, the lean, hard men in scarlet tunics and wide-brimmed Stetsons. In fiction, in the movies and in hard fact they are matched only by the French Foreign Legion and the Texas Rangers for deeds of almost legendary valor.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, to give them their official title, are celebrating this year the sixteenth anniversary of their service as administrators of justice and guardians of the right in the millions of square miles of plains and mountains and waters which stretch between the Atlantic and the Pacific, and from the Great Lakes to the North Pole. It was back in the days of Canada's Wild West that the Mounties won their spurs and established themselves in the high regard of all who admire brave and resolute men.

It was in 1870 that the Canadian government acquired the western provinces, and it was just 60 years ago this summer that 300 men left Toronto with instructions from the government to establish law and order in the huge frontier region extending from the Red River in Manitoba, to the Rocky Mountains, and from the international boundary to the Polar Sea.

During the next four decades the mounted police built up a reputation that made the force world-famous. In those early years, when the prairies were absorbing a multitude of settlers from Europe, the mounted policeman was more than a symbol of law. With an uncanny mixture of tact and resolution, he dealt with refractory Indians and trouble-making half-breeds, and with the criminal elements that followed in the wake of the settlers. When the discovery of gold sent a horde of treasure hunters flocking into the Yukon, the mounted police kept order in the rough, hot-blooded mining camps and made life and property safe all the way from Chilcoot Pass to Rampart House.

Today it is in sealskin jacket, rather than scarlet tunic, and in bearskin cap rather than broad-brimmed felt sombrero, and behind a dog team or at the stick of an airplane rather than on horseback, that the mountie performs the feats that bring him into the news, or keep him thrillingly alive in fiction and in the movies. In the cities and the populated provinces their work nowadays corresponds to that of our state police and game wardens, with a dash of secret service duty included.

The Pooh Bah Of a Vast Domain

BUT up in Eskimo Land, around Hudson's Bay and in the Arctic Circle, a corporal's guard of these determined chaps are the sole upholders of the dignity and majesty of the Dominion. Their domain is a bleak and trackless region of 1,400,000 square miles, almost half the size of the United States, and in many parts a barren waste, except for lichen, moss and stunted growths. The constable of the Arctic is entirely on his own. Solitary and perilous journeys are his lot through the snows and ice, traversing such stretches of water as Great Bear Lake or Great Slave Lake, with areas of 10,000 square miles; or traveling the mighty Mackenzie or the Peace River, with only his dogs to keep him company, and perhaps tracking down a fleeing criminal at the end of a 2,000-mile chase.

He is police officer, magistrate, coroner, marriage license clerk, immigration inspector, customs officer, fisheries and game warden, administrator of estates, guard of criminals and insane persons, physician to the sick and conductor of funeral services where there is no clergyman. He is the Law. He is the white man's government.

What the world regards as a great adventure is just everyday routine for men of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in these Far North patrols. The late Inspector Albert H. Joy, with two companions, made a 1,500-mile patrol through the uninhabited Arctic archipelago. It took them 81 days by sledge and was considered nothing out of the ordinary. It was three months after their departure from North Devon Island that Joy and his constables reached the post on Bache Peninsula, and in all that time they had not seen another human being and had lived by their rifles on polar bear, seal and caribou.

The First Report In Two Years

ONLY a few weeks ago the Bache Peninsula Post figured in the news by way of Greenland. An Eskimo arrived in Greenland with news to be conveyed to Commissioner McBrien, of the Royal Mounted, that the three constables up there at Bache, on top of the world, were alive and well. Nothing had been heard from them for two years, the heavy ice of last summer having prevented the ship from Hudson Bay reaching them.

How had they spent their time? There was an item in their report which told the story. They had made a 3,000-mile journey through the wastes, searching for the German geologist, Kreuger, who, with two companions, had been up at the back of beyond since 1929. If the boat gets through before this summer is done with, the three will be relieved. Otherwise there they will stay, on the job.

The Canadian Government must keep policemen in the Arctic because the Eskimo, while ordinarily a kindly person, is still living in the Stone Age, seeing nothing wrong, for example, in suicide or in the destruction of children when they become a burden. The introduction of firearms into the Arctic added to crimes of violence and to the wanton destruction of game and fur-bearing animals.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police today number 2,500 officers and men. Of course not all are the dashing fellows we see on magazine covers. About one out of ten rides a horse. Automobiles, motorcycles and dog sledges far outnumber horses in the service. But young or middle-aged, tall, short, thin or broad, they are men of character, courage and decision, going by the code:

"Uphold the right and wherever you are sent."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—I was interviewed today. This happens to those of us in the solitary grooves of life now and then. The interviewer was a personable Miss from a college paper in the South. She was as unused to interviewing as I to being interviewed. So embarrassment was mutual.

She sat on a modern plush bench in front of my desk, lit a cigaret and began: "What was your first newspaper salary?" Unconsciously she touched a tender area of memory. But I replied: "Two bucks a week." Then of a sudden I had one of those rarities Will Hogg used to dub "a lucid interval."

I halted proceedings while I sent across to the Waldorf for a public stenographer. Why not set down exactly what was said between us in "he" and "she" fashion? And perhaps I could kill two birds with one stone—an article for her and a column for myself. Here it is anyway.

She. Who influenced you most to take up newspaper work?

He: James T. Johnson, a small town newspaper reporter.

She: Why?

He: Because I heard he got $18 a week and passes to everything.

* * *

She: Has there ever been a time when you wished you had gone into some other calling?

He: Well, I watched Lindbergh drive up Fifth avenue on his return from France. That made everything else look rather silly.

She: What do you mean by that?

He: I scarcely know. It just popped out. ?

She: Why is it you never write of politics or world events?

He: I leave those topics to weightier minds.

She: Do you know most of your readers think you are roly-poly and bald?

He: I wouldn't know about that. You can see for yourself it is libel.

She: Would you mind standing up and turning around?

He: I wouldn't. But I warn you—I creak in the turns.

She: For how many papers do you write?

He: I cannot say precisely. Considerably more than 300.

* * *

She: Every writer has a theme running through his stuff. What would you say is yours?

He: O, I should say huckleberry pastures and the clank of cowbells.

She: Do you have many interruptions while turning out your columns?

He: Many. But not so interesting as this.

She: You know how to compliment.

He: I have my moments. You should catch me in a hammock with a mandolin!

She: You have written New York is the ideal city. Is there anything you think it lacks? That is, something very essential?

He: Outside of the feeling of hills, nothing.

She: Do you still wear all those noisy shirts and neckties I've read about?

He: I rainbow a little now and then. Somebody has to with Jimmy Walker away.

She: Even that green house robe you wear could not exactly be called modest.

He: It could be if one wanted to lie uneffectually.

She: In your personal piffle I don't remember of you telling what word you have misspelled more than any other?

He: I always spell Adirondack with three a's. What is your's?

She: Please, I am interviewing.

He: I stand corrected. Man lost all rights long ago.

She: I notice the books in this room are modern. Do you think modern writers are beating the old times?

He: Very few outdistanced Swift. And Chaucer is still pretty good.

She: I must be going. It was nice of you to see me.

He: It was good of you to come. Those barking hyenas in the hall won't bite. They are just a couple of lily-livered bluffers.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Remorse—we think of that as one of the virtues.

Blaming ourselves — how fine that is; how honest and brave!

But is it?

Is remorse really the courageous act we've been led to believe? Should we admire people who go around telling what tramps they've been? Should we admire ourselves when we find ourselves wallowing in regret?

No it isn't; and we shouldn't.

A certain amount of remorse—a decent interval of regret and confession — that's necessary and healthy. But after that, look out!

FOR REMORSE CAN, AND OFTEN DOES, SPEEDILY BECOME A RACKET!

Why do we "take the blame"—and keep on taking it?

Sometimes because we are honestly sorry, and want to mend our ways. But often, there's quite a different motive.

BEING HUMAN, WE LIKE TO SHOW OFF.

AND CONFESSING OUR SINS IS ONE OF THE BEST POSSIBLE WAYS OF HOGGING THE SPOT LIGHT.

Regretting our sins can be, and often is, as conceited an act as boasting about 'em.

We can't force people to listen to us endlessly while we praise ourselves. But every decent citizen feels a moral obligation to lend a sympathetic ear, and hand, to the fellow who's confessing his sin. Also, such listening tickles human vanity—makes the decent citizen feel that he's a Mr. God. So, on two counts, we're always sure of an audience if we start Getting Sorry.

Yes, chronic regret is certainly a swell way of gratifying our yen for publicity. And it serves an even more useful end—

IT'S A PERFECT ALIBI FOR POSTPONING REAL REFORM.

The immediate and necessary step after being sorry is, of course, getting busy and making good. But making good is always an uncomfortable and inconvenient process. It implies retiring from the spot light and taking your rap; which means plenty of humiliation and hard work. Naturally, no lazy, cowardly, conceited human being is keen on beginning a program like that! And so, though we may be sincerely sorry for a bad record, we like to find some scheme whereby we can postpone starting a new one, and yet save our faces.

WALLOWING IN REGRET SERVES THAT PURPOSE PERFECTLY.

You can postpone reform indefinitely by just talking about it. At the same time you can gratify your hunger for publicity, alibi your laziness, and get a vicarious kick out of remembering your past deviltries.

Could anything be sweeter? Nothing could!

Nor could any habit be more demoralizing. More good human time and energy are wasted—more cussedness is committed—under the "sacred" pretence of remorse and grief, than in all the crime on the police blotter.

It's as vicious to spend your time regretting your sins as it was to commit them originally. In either case you waste, spoil and sidestep life, and devote all your attention to your own selfish self.

If you're really sorry and ashamed for something that you've done, don't talk about it; don't grieve over it. GET BUSY!

Get busy and do something useful and constructive — something of which you can be proud.

ACTION IS THE ONLY REAL REPENTANCE.

SNIVELLING OVER YOUR SINS IS JUST ANOTHER FORM OF LOAFING.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

Offerings

As one who gives you flowers
On golden summer days
When every hill and meadow blooms
To vie with gardens ways.
Some prefer love so lightly
It is of little worth;
A daffodil the more, perhaps,
Upon the flower-strewn earth.
As one who, when chill winter
Comes roaring down the land,
Brings you the fruit of patient toil,
A white rose in his hand.
I come with life's one blossom,
So frail a thing, so small,
And yet so precious in my sight
This love that is my all!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

How do you arrive at your opinions?

Aren't some of them the result of personal grievances?

You desire to gain something—are thwarted—and so you feel antagonistic toward affairs in general?

How often is your "decided opinion" either for, or against, based upon a study of the subject, without personal bias?

Not often; but usually when some privilege is denied you which you wish to enjoy—then, you form a warped opinion.

Something you should not expect to do, is prohibited.

Immediately you voice a strong opinion against the law.

It is not the principle involved that influences your opinion but the interference with what you might like to do.

In other ways, you may be fanatical.

You enjoy yourself in a certain way but object to others having the same opportunity to enjoy themselves—in their way.

You think they should not be allowed to do what YOU think is wrong.

What you do and think is right, the other crowd opposes.

If you are not breaking a law, you should be free to do what you want if it harms no one; and the other fellow should be as free as you.

ISN'T IT SO?

Many talk like philosophers and live like fools.

It is as great a point of wisdom to hide ignorance as to discover knowledge.

The man who got in on the ground floor is now stumbling around among the debris in the cellar.

The only thing they never seem able to tax too much is the public's patience.

Some motorists think they are setting the world on fire by burning up the roads.

When a girl is engaged to a man she is his fiancee. After the marriage he is her financier.

Text for Today But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.—Matthew, xix:22.
